Mortgage protest swells here

By PAUL MINVIELLE

The campaign to force Ottawa to lower mortgage interest rates has exploded like a bomb in nearly 100 Canadian towns and cities.

And in Victoria the fuse has been lit by hairdresser Ena Curran.

She is fighting the battle here for Viv Woolford, the car salesman from Mississauga, Ont. who launched the national campaign in February.

Curran, of 4171 Borden in Saanich, read about Woolford, heard him on radio, agreed with what he said and wrote to find out how she could do more.

The next thing she knew she was standing outside Victoria shopping centres collecting signatures on a protest petition.

"Out of 200 people I approached, only five walked away," Curran said.

One person who refused to sign her petition was with a mortgage company, another was a banker.

One man just laughed.

"He said he had money invested in mortgages and there was no way he'd sign anything."

And one young man asked her: "What does it matter? They're all screwing us anyway."

But things are happening.

People are following the example of fictional TV anchorman Howard Beale in the movie Network and leaning out their windows to collectively scream to the heavens: "We're mad as hell and we're not going to take it anymore!"

Curran, who works six days a week, is waiting for someone to help her give the movement in Victoria some momentum.

"People can phone me at 477-0069, but I'm not always home. It would be better if they just dropped me a note or a postcard to let us know they suppport our fight against high interest rates."

In a phone interview from Mississauga, Woolford told the Times interest in the movement is snowballing.

"We had people in eight provinces within eight days of the first stories about me," he said. "In 10 days, we were coast to coast."

A meeting will be held Sunday March 30 in Mississauga to form an official group. Eventually Woolford hopes to establish chapters across Canada.

Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau and NDP leader Ed Boadbent have promised to send representatives but Woolford emphasizes that the organization will not be affiliated with any political party.

The movement has begun to sink roots in B.C., with adherents in Penticton, Vancouver, Kaslo, Delta, Salmon Arm, and Duncan.

A meeting in Vancouver last Wednesday attracted 200 people and 71 of them signed up for the Association to Control Mortgage Rates.

Mrs. Margaret Shelton, 2026 Stainsbury, Vancouver, a member of the group, said today it's hoped the government can be pressured into bringing interest rates down to 10 per cent.

Woolford and his wife are convinced it can be done.

"In the short time since this started I've had to quit my job. My wife and I are agreed. We're prepared to lose everything we've got to prove a point."

So far, there are 200,000 people in 93 towns and cities across the country who agree with him.

Woolford wonders what would happen if two million homeowners across the country decided one month to withhold a mortgage payment.

"I don't think the financial institutions could stand the pressure," he mused.

But the problem is high interest rates.

Cyril Shelford, former Socred MLA for Skeena and minister of agriculture who is in the process of moving to Victoria, agrees with the aims of Woolford's movement and told Curran he'll help.

Shelford said he ran federally on a lower mortgage interest platform in 1972.

"Did you know that as recently as 1870 they had the death penalty in France for high interest rates?" asked the former minister.

He says the federal government should never have done away with the 6½-per-cent limit on Central Mortage and Housing Corporation mortgages.

"They should have imposed that limit right across the board."

He said the federal government never lost money on the CMHC mortagage scheme as the money came right back into the fund, with interest, unlike many other government home ownership schemes that have been introduced since.

Shelford will meet Senator Ray Perreault to determine what can be done.

Under Proposal 89 (named for his condominium number), Mississauga's Woolford wants first mortage rates reduced to between 10 and 12 per cent and between 12 and 14 per cent for second mortgages.

He started the protest when 20 families in his condominium development revealed they were in danger of losing their homes if they were forced to refinance at the latest mortgage interest rates.

First mortgage interest rates have gone from 9 per cent to 15 per cent, boosting payments from $475 to $732, a crippling increase for many.

RESCUE ATTEMPT FAILED when reporter Mike Pettapiece, foreground, was unable to reach Leo Wolf, 72, clinging to an ice floe in the flood-swollen Credit River near Georgetown, Ont. Pettapiece had been assigned by the Hamilton Spectator to news coverage of a pelting spring storm when he saw Wolf struggling in the water after his canoe overturned. Wolf was finally rescued by a volunteer fireman after being in the water about 20 minutes and treated in hospital for exposure. Flood story, page 2.

Iran furious as Egypt takes shah

TEHRAN (CP) — Mohammad Reza Pahlavi's sudden flight to Egypt has heightened tension in Iran and may have added complications to the American hostage problem.

The deposed shah's dramatic departure from Panama angered government officials here Monday and stirred supporters of the student militants holding the 50 American hostages to plan a mass demonstration today.

Siyed Karim Moussavi Ardabili, Iran's prosecutor-general, said in an interview with The Canadian Press that the former monarch's move to Egypt was an "American plot" and could "cause great difficulties to the hostage situation."

In Rome, the head of Iran's Islamic courts which ordered the executions of hundreds of members of Pahlavi's regime, condemned the deposed monarch's move to Egypt and repeated a warning that some of the American hostages will be tried as "traitors" and jailed if convicted. Ayatollah Sadegh Khalkhali said the other hostages will be freed after Iran's new parliament convenes. The parliament, or Najlis, is expected to meet no earlier than mid-April.

The revolutionary guards, the militant Moslem clergy and other revolutionary groups announced a mass demonstration in front of the United States Embassy today to support the students and attack the deposed shah and Egyptian President Anwar Sadat.

Hundreds of thousands of people are expected to jam the streets around the embassy because Tehran is still in the middle of Iran's week-long new year's holiday.

Pahlavi's action may have added problems for Iranian President Abolhassan Bani-Sadr who has taken a moderate line in the hostage crisis. He has been critical of the hostage-taking though he is firm in demanding the return of the former monarch for trial on crimes charges in Iran.

Chances of extraditing Pahlavi from Egypt are even less likely than from Panama. Sadat is bitterly critical of Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini and has withdrawn the Egyptian Embassy staff from Tehran.

In Cairo, Sadat said today Pahlavi would be staying in Egypt permanently.

Visit the stars

The Victoria Times and radio station VI*90 once again are offering readers a chance to visit the stars in Hollywood in the annual Academy Award contest.

Readers who correctly predict the Oscar winners for best picture, best actor and best actress will have a chance to win the California trip or one of five runner-up prizes.

Full details are printed in an advertisement on page 21 today.

The grand prize includes airfare for two to Los Angeles plus ground expenses, including hotel, for the weekend.

The runner-up awards are five chances on a dinner for two at The Empress plus two tickets to an Odeon theatre.

The major prizes will be drawn from among those with the correct answers at an Odeon theatre party at 7 p.m. Wednesday, April 16, two days after the Oscars are announced.

In addition, about 150 double passes to the theatre party will be awarded during the contest.

Everyone who enters will have a chance to win the double passes whether they have the correct answers or not.

This year the Oscar competition for best picture is expected to be a close race. Kramer vs. Kramer is highly regarded, along with All That Jazz and Apocalypse Now. The odds are a bit longer for Norma Rae and Breaking Away, but all five pictures are serious contenders.

Sally Field is the early favorite in the race for best actress for her performance in Norma Rae while Jane Fonda, Jill Clayburgh, Marsha Mason and Bette Midler also have strong support.

For best actor, Dustin Hoffman has a good chance to win a second Oscar for Kramer vs. Kramer while Al Pacino and Roy Schieder are strong challengers. Jack Lemmon and Peter Sellers have a lot of sentimental support in this category.

The Times will run articles on the 10 candidates for the two top Oscars as a regular daily feature. The advertisement containing all contest rules plus the official entry form will also appear daily.

The annual Academy Award show will be telecast from the Los Angeles Music Centre on Monday, April 14. Host this year is Johnny Carson.

CP freight ships to island idled

Canadian Pacific freight service between Vancouver Island and Vancouver was halted today by a strike involving 60 members of the Seafarers International Union.

The strike idled two company ferries, the Carrier Princess and the Trailer Princess, as well as a leased, self-propelled barge, the Seaspan Doris.

The ships carry about 1,500 rail cars and 5,000 truck trailers every month between Vancouver and Nanaimo and 2,500 truck trailers between Vancouver and Swartz Bay.

The strike began at noon when the Carrier Princess docked in Vancouver after a run from Nanaimo.

The main issue is wages, with the SIU members seeking parity with deckhands on coastal tugboats. The employees' last contract expired Dec. 31, 1979.

No further talks are scheduled.

The SIU employees are seamen, storekeepers, oilers, water tenders and unlicensed engineroom staff.

Meanwhile, conciliation talks are continuing with the Canadian Merchant Service Guild which represents the ships' officers.

The CP strike won't eliminate barge service to the Island, however, as a Canadian National railbarge makes one trip a day between Vancouver and Victoria.

A CN spokesman said today the company's volume will likely increase as a result of the CP strike and continue to rise as long as the dispute lasts.

Freedom for hostages?

BOGOTA (AP) — Colombian newspapers quoted government sources as saying five of the 32 hostages held by guerrillas in the embassy of the Dominican Republic would be freed after negotiations today.

The names of the five were not given and there is no confirmation of the reports, which appeared in the newspapers Sunday.

Rene soothes Quebec's English

Times News Services

An independent Quebec would feel so culturally secure that restrictive language legislation would no longer be necessary, according to Premier Rene Levesque.

In a fine-tuned performance aimed at placating fears of Quebec's English-speaking minority as the province's referendum vote nears, the secessionist premier amplified and strengthened past hints an independent Quebec might ease existing legislation making French the sole official language of the province.

Levesque, in his most confident forecast yet, predicted Sunday in Montreal his Parti Quebecois forces would win a "yes" vote for his sovereignty-association referendum, the first step towards Quebec's separation from Canada.

"We want to win and now, more and more, we expect to win," Levesque told a relatively small and mainly converted group of English-speaking supporters.

He promised magnanimity in victory. But in an interview later with Montreal radio station CJAD, Levesque said he was prepared to act against any panic-stricken capital outflow that may follow a "yes" vote, such as occurred after the PQ's election in November 1976.

"If it should come to any extreme... there is precedent, if you need any, for exchange controls."

Levesque said Quebec's existing language legislation has succeeded in creating "respect" for the French language.

"I can make it a commitment, for as long as we can make a commitment as a government ... that there would be no need for restrictive language legislation in a sovereign Quebec," Levesque said in a 50-minute address aimed at trying to break the 1 million-strong, English-speaking bloc expected to vote solidly "no" to his pursuit of Quebec's independence.

Levesque also said the Quebec government would not tolerate any violence that might follow the loss of the referendum.

"We will not lead, nor even condone, any (violent) outburst that might follow the referendum," he said in a speech broadcast live in Montreal on English-language radio and television.

"Indeed, since we would still be the government, we would stop any untoward outburst and punish it, whatever the source," he said.

Levesque also said Sunday his government will have to legislate 5,600 striking Montreal civic workers back to work.

Meanwhile, Quebec Liberal leader Claude Ryan says the Parti Quebecois government's tactics in the National Assembly debate of the independence referendum were divisive.

The crowd of about 1,400 mainly Italian-speaking immigrants in the Montreal suburb of Ste. Leonard cheered enthusiastically Sunday when Ryan said the PQ had "cheated" by focusing on the answer instead of the question during the three-week debate that ended last Thursday.

Ryan said he also noted a disturbing trend developing from the debate that could divide Quebecers in the course of the coming campaign for the referendum, expected in late May or early June.

Rampaging Ganaraska River floods downtown Port Hope

Flood-ravaged towns seek aid

PORT HOPE, Ont. (CP) — Residents of this flood-ravaged community won't know until Wednesday if they will receive disaster aid from the provincial government.

Tom Wells, Ontario minister of inter-governmental affairs, toured the area today to survey the damage and will raise the matter Wednesday at the regular cabinet meeting.

The town of 10,000 is seeking matching aid from the province to help repair the damage caused Friday by the rain-swollen Ganaraska River.

While mop up operations continue, preliminary estimates put damage at between $6 million and $10 million.

Russell Rowe, Conservative member of the legislature for Northumberland — which includes Port Hope — said Sunday he has no doubt the Ontario cabinet will agree to provide disaster relief.

Buildings were ripped apart and roads became huge craters as the Ganaraska River swelled above its normal level Friday, sending ice and debris crashing through buildings and destroying parking meters.

On Saturday, as the river receded, slabs of asphalt, parts of building walls and twisted appliances were strewn throughout the downtown section.

Between 45 and 60 businesses were damaged or destroyed in the flood and several buildings have been condemned — but amazingly there were no injuries.

Gerry Houston, deputy reeve of the town of 10,000, said between 60 and 75 per cent of the property damaged was uninsured. If the town is declared a disaster area, the provincial government could match dollar-for-dollar any relief money raised privately.

The nearby communities of Cobourg and Warkworth were also badly flooded.

Dow Jones down

NEW YORK (UPI) - With investors putting their money in Treasury offerings, the stock market plunged early today in relatively slow trading that also reflected deep concern about inflation.

The Dow Jones industrial average, a 26.54-point loser last week, was off 9.13 points to 776.02 around noon EST(9 a.m. PST). Friday's 3.93-point loss took the Dow to the lowest level since it finished at 775.21 on April 13. 1978.

Brokers said the market could go into a tailspin since the Dow has fallen through the 780 level, which is an area at which many investors had made purchases in the past.

Declines led advances, 1,094 to 209, among the 1,652 issues crossing the New York Stock Exchange tape. NYSE volume amounted to about 14,100,000 shares.

The Treasury's plans to seek $11.5 billion from the nation's money markets were drawing investors from stocks because the government's short-term securities have been yielding around 15 percent.

Those high-yielding government instruments and soaring interest rates have devastated the bond market and stocks. The Dow average had plunged 118 points since reaching its 1980 high of 903.84 on Feb. 13.

Meanwhile, the U.S. dollar, already buoyed by record high U.S. interest rates, scored new gains today on European exchanges.

Ixtoc I capped

MEXICO CITY (AP) Engineers have finally managed to cap the runaway Ixtoc I oil well in the Gulf of Mexico, a spokesman for Mexico's Pemex oil combine announced today.

The well had spewed out more than 3.1 million gallons of crude oil since the blowout June 3.

The Pemex spokesman said a third and final cement plug was successfully introduced into the well 80 kilometres off the Mexican coast shortly before midnight Sunday, shutting off the flow of crude oil and natural gas.

Desperate mom finds a home

Carolyne Keiller, whose frustrating attempts to find a home for her family were detailed in the Times last Tuesday, has found a place to live after weeks of answering ads and phoning provincial and federal agencies.

She and her two school-aged children and their pets must leave their small $160-a-month rented house on Lyall March 31 because it's been sold.

On $1,000 a month total take-home pay from her job with the B.C. Medical Plan, she said it was almost impossible to buy food and clothing and pay the rent on a house for her family of three.

The story in the newspaper produced about 10 telephone calls, mostly from warm-hearted people who offered their own homes as emergency accommodation if she couldn't find a place to move to at month's end.

They included three single mothers in similar straits who must move in the next month or two and still don't have alternative accommodation. She promised to pass on any good tips to them.

But the callers didn't know of any houses to rent in the under-$400 range where the landlord didn't object to children and pets.

However, her small classified ad which has been running for more than a week in the Houses Wanted to Rent section of the Victoria papers finally brought a nibble.

It's the main floor of a house in Esquimalt on the Gorge and the owner doesn't mind cats and dogs, although the rent is $425 a month.

But she's decided to take it for the time being.

"All the other places were $400, too," she said.

"I don't know. It's a tough situation for everybody, but there should be an agency that would help you if your rent was more than one-third of your income."

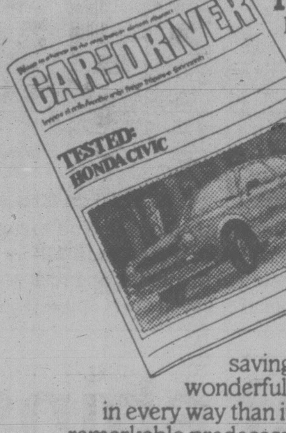
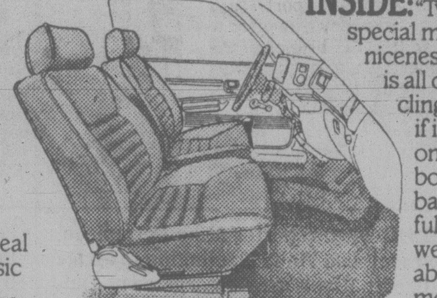
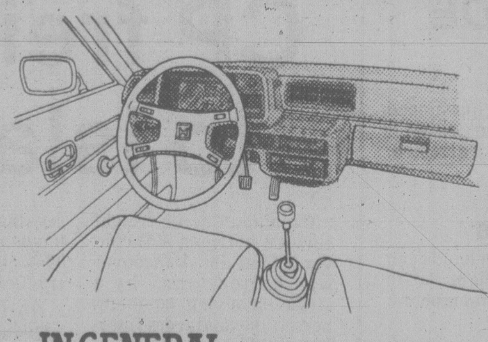
"MEET THE MERCEDES OF MINICARS."
CAR AND DRIVER. FEBRUARY 8, 1980.



PRAISE BE: Early this year the editors of Car and Driver magazine ran a road test on the new Honda Civic 1500 GL. Here's what they had to say; The original Civic… "has been the ideal minicar for basic transportation buyers who don't mind having a little fun while they're saving fuel." And "the new Civic felt wonderful, better in every way than its rather remarkable predecessor."



INSIDE: "Two areas deserve special mention for their niceness. The carpeting is all one piece and clings to the floor as if it were sprayed on, and the seats - both front and back - are delightful." And "what we're talking about is 13 percent more interior room than the old Civic with only a two inch stretch of the wheel-base, and no increase in overall length."



IN FRONT: "The instrument panel is molded into a shape that says function without funny business. The steering wheel is a lovely black four-spoker that's better made and more finely detailed than your average Mercedes wheel. Gimmicks are noticeably absent."

IN GENERAL: "More power. More torque. More kick-in-the-rump acceleration. And therefore more fun. The steering is quick and informative, the roadholding remarkable. The longer wheel-base and the more liveable interior also help make the Civic way more than just a commuter. Now it's plenty versatile enough to be an excellent only car." That's what Car and Driver said. To which we would simply like to add that the new Civic gets better mileage than its predecessor. And the standard hatchback models actually sell for less than last year's did.

IN BACK: "Trunk space is remarkable in its accessibility; Honda has run the hatch opening the full width of the body and almost all the way down to the bumper level."

Police-choked man dies, drug raid method queried

BURNABY (CP) — An investigation and probably an inquest will be held into the death of a man who died Friday, 13 days after choking on a balloon full of heroin capsules while being arrested, Coroner Dianne Messier said Saturday.

Dennis Williams, 29, died in hospital after life-support systems were withdrawn. Hospital authorities said he suffered severe brain damage because of a lack of oxygen.

Williams had been unconscious since he was choked by an RCMP drug squad officer March 12 outside his home. Police said he was trying to swallow some heroin caps and choked on the balloon containing them.

RCMP Inspector Richard Dickens said a policeman grabbed Williams by the throat and choked him until other police found 25 caps of heroin in his hands. He was released and spoke to them until he began choking and staggering.

Police applied artificial resucitation and called an ambulance which took Williams to hospital. Ambulance personnel checked Williams's throat and removed a balloon containing 25 caps of heroin. They estimated he had been without oxygen for eight minutes.

Williams's death has revived the long-simmering debate over the police technique of choking drug suspects who attempt to swallow drugs when they are arrested.

Laurie Baker, who lived with Williams, said Saturday she is concerned that the Criminal Code allows police to use as much force as is necessary to prevent a suspect from getting rid of evidence.

"It's not the sort of thing we like doing," said Dickens. "But it's the only way to prevent them from swallowing the evidence.

"Some drug users practise so they can swallow large bundles of drugs quickly. I've heard some boast that no policeman who is more than three steps away can ever stop them from swallowing what they're holding."

The Concerned Citizens Drug Study and Education Society, a volunteer drug education group, has called for an investigation into the Criminal Code provisions.

"Someone has to look at the law so police don't have the power to choke someone to that extent," said society spokesman Mary McInnis. "If he hadn't been choked, Williams might have been able to swallow the drugs and wouldn't have died."

Old boys an obstacle to B.C. Liberals: Iona

VANCOUVER (CP) — Iona Campagnolo, former federal minister of fitness and amateur sport, says she turned down an offer to lead the B.C. branch of the Liberal party because it is dominated by an old boys' network determined to keep the Social Credit Party in power.

Campagnolo said Sunday the network, whose members she declined to identify, is circumventing the democratic process by ruining the provincial party's chances of winning an election in B.C.

"There's not much of a point (of leading the party) if it's still to be run by the old boy network, by the establishment, which can pick up a phone and call a few friends to ensure the Socreds stay in power and the (Liberal) party goes nowhere," she said in an interview.

Campagnolo said it was Senator Ray Perrault who suggested she run at the next provincial leadership convention in May. She said she told him she has no plans to take up the offer now, but is not closing any doors.

CAMPAGNOLA

She said if she were to take over the post, it would cost the party at least $150,000 in wages, not the $375,000 a previous report said she demanded.

"If they're going to get someone to act as leader, they're going to have to pay them a living wage," she said. "What we're looking at is a five-year building program and, as I said, the leader needs a living wage. That would have to be $30,000 to $40,000 a year, and some agreement at the end of it that I wouldn't go without a pension."

The party's present leader, Jev Tothill, is not paid a salary although party president Shirley McLoughlin said they are "hustling to raise funds" to pay him one so that he can take time off work to attend the current session of the legislature.

The party president also said she is unaware of any offer made to Campagnolo.

Tothill, an educational television programs co-ordinator, who lives in Duncan, was named party leader last year but has only been able to attend the legislature durng his summer holidays.

There are no Liberal members in the B.C. legislature.

Campagnolo recently renewed her contract as a television talk-show host with the CBC and said she is happy with her job.

Adventurers in kayaks head north

VANCOUVER (CP) — Four young Americans pushed off in kayaks from Westham Island at the mouth of the Fraser River Saturday and began a 2,000-kilometre voyage to the Arctic Ocean.

Chuck Benda, 27, of Bellingham, Wash., said the group will retrace the historic fur-trading routes used by explorers Simon Fraser and Alexander Mackenzie.

Benda, Todd Parisian, 18, Tod Spedding, 25 and Morgan O'Brien, 25, plan to paddle and portage their kayaks up the Fraser River to Prince George, in central B.C., over the Peace River system and then onto the Mackenzie River via Great Slave lake.

They expect to arrive in Tuktoyaktuk on the Beaufort Sea by mid-Septmber.

The adventurers also plan to film the trip and the northern landscape.

"It's not going to remain in its natural state for very much longer," Benda said. "We'd like to share it with others.

Before the law

B.C. Attorney-General Allan Williams recently told reporters that he felt personally insulted at the suggestion that he might be having trouble distinguishing between his role as a member of the government and his job as B.C.'s chief crown counsel.

Williams was trying to assure the public that he understands the office of the attorney-general is above partisan politics and that he can impartially, and with integrity, administer the province's judicial system. Williams himself is obviously convinced of his virtue. But his actions concerning the Vogel affair and Indian food hunting rights in the past week cast doubt on that ability.

To tell B.C. Crown prosecutors that they must get the green light from Victoria before laying charges against native Indians for killing game animals out of season without a permit is either to admit the law is bad or to deliver a vote of non-confidence in the lawyers in the field whose job it is assess evidence and decide if legal action is warranted.

The latter option is obviously out; otherwise Williams and his senior Victoria staff would be worried over a parking offence going to court without their knowledge.

To admit the law is bad may deserve a round of applause from native peoples who have been fighting it tooth and nail since its inception. But to deal with that bad law in a fashion that appears to discriminate against white sustenance hunters, and to do it in a fashion that appears to link the administration of justice to a political party and government which is very much a party to native Indians land claims and aboriginal rights issues, can only undermine the public's perception of justice being administered impartially.

The astonishing aspect of this matter is that Williams still insists that he is right. "Everyone complains I'm interfering with the justice system. I'm only trying to make certain that in these cases justice is served." As an accomplished member of the legal profession, Williams certainly knows that equality before the law is the basis of our judicial system. But at the same time one has to wonder if he is not so wrapped up in his integrity that he has forgotten that, as an individual, he cannot tamper or appear to tamper with the dispensation of justice without the system becoming suspect.

While denying his directive means that no charges will be laid against native Indians, Williams has left the impression that sustenance hunters are not equal before the law. If the law is bad Williams should rewrite it — and quickly.

Similiarly, Williams believes his personnal exoneration of deputy-attorney general Richard Vogel should end the controversy surrounding the man. While it may well be the end, save possible libel suits, Williams has left a sour taste in the mouths of people concerned about the conflict inherent in a system that allows the integrity of its judicial process to be investigated by the senior government member responsible for that process.

Williams' review of the allegations against Vogel raised as many questions as were apparently answered. And if the other questions aren't answered, all the public has is William's word that he can put himself above partisan considerations. As with the hunting laws, Williams is not inspiring confidence in his ability to do so.

... before the sewer

It's ironic that at a time when the provincial government seems to be waking up; albeit in an undesirable and discriminating fashion, to that fact native Indians food hunters might be getting a raw deal under the Wildlife Act, the federal environment department has increased the number of beaches in the Greater Victoria area that are closed to shellfish harvesting.

The closure of beaches between Swartz Bay and Ten Mile Point affects Indian and non-Indian like. Sewage pollution knows no favorites.

It's not hard to sympathize with a spokesman for the East Saanich Indian Band who questioned the wisdom of municipal engineers who ten years ago gave assurances sewage outfalls would not polute local beaches. Even now the Capital Regional District is still agonizing over the Clover Point outfall — a sewage pipe that the engineers first said was safe at 6,500 feet but now say is safe at 3,500 feet. Too bad health safety is measured in clams saved rather than clams lost.

Then resign

I'm responding to a news story about regional directors wanting a pay increase. I find the attitude of Ed Lubick and other regional directors who are crying for more money absolutely revolting.

Let's not forget that being a regional director is a part-time job and requires no special qualifications or training. In my opinion, the current remuneration for directors is in excess of their ability and production. The remuneration was never intended to be enough to live on.

Before these part-time politicians dig their hands deeper into my pocketbook to support themselves they should remember that no one forced them to run for office, that political pay for a part-time job at this level is a supplementary income to a steady job or pensions — in most cases, and that they knew what the pay was and the hours were when they filed nomination papers.

When elected representatives vote themselves a raise in pay, do you suppose they give a damn about the senior citizens or people on fixed incomes who will have to pay more to the politicians and consequently have less for themselves?

This is not the time to be spending more money; it is the time to stop. Is there no one at this level intelligent enough and courageous enough to practice financial restraint and give the taxpayer a break?

My advice to the regional directors who want a pay increase is: if you can't afford to work at the price paid when you filed nomination paper, then resign. — Shirley Wilde, 3758 Duke Road.

Help elderly

In Calgary bus passes are free to everyone over 65 years of age.

Here in Victoria bus passes are $10 a year. One recent writer (letter, Means test, March 11) suggests a means test. Why? The real need of the passes is to make it easy for the elderly to get about town. Some tire easily, cannot carry much home on one trip and are sometimes slow.

In Calgary everything is set to help them to get out and about the city the easy way. Even the elderly care places have buses right to the doors.

This kind of help encourages them to move about, lifts their spirits and helps business. Our elderly are just as important to the business of the city as our friendly tourists who come here. But our people are here and use our buses constantly, with bus passes or otherwise. We do have friendly bus drivers always willing to help the slow ones off and on the buses.

Must every kind of help for our elderly here be first and always measured by the dollar sign? — Mrs. B. Brazil, 676 Battery St.

Need more

I am writing on behalf of the thousands of old age pensioners who went through two world wars and the Depression and have no other income.

When they have paid their rent they don't have enough to live on until the end of the month, so they live uptown with one room and a hot plate because the free pass that some folks are roaring about costs five dollars and they can't afford it.

Why not give these people a pension sufficient for them to live like other people, then they wouldn't need a so-called free pass. Anyone who thinks all old-age pensioners are rolling in money should go and get his head examined. — Henry Copeland, 206-535 Niagara Street.

Liberals lose round one of the referendum campaign

First of a series

QUEBEC — The referendum debate is moving into its crucial public phase with federalists admitting they have lost the lead to the forces supporting a mandate to negotiate Quebec's independence in an economic association with the rest of Canada.

The PQ majority in the national assembly approved the official wording of the referendum question this week, at the end of a three-week, 35-hour debate. Quebecers will vote on the question before summer, probably some time in June.

After the latest opinion poll indicated a substantial move to the Yes, especially among francophones, Liberal leader Claude Ryan acknowledged his federalist forces were lagging behind.

"It means we have a lot of hard work to do," he said, suggesting the PQ advance was largely due to its direct, intensive campaign for the Yes throughout Quebec over the past two months.

Easter start date

The federalist forces had not yet begun to campaign, he said, and would not begin in earnest until after Easter.

Here is the question, as approved by the national assembly this week:

"The government of Quebec has made public its proposal to negotiate a new agreement with the rest of Canada, based on the equality of nations; this agreement would enable Quebec to acquire the exclusive power to make its laws, levy its taxes and establish relations abroad — in other words, sovereignty — and at the same time to maintain with Canada an economic association including a common currency; any change in political status resulting from these negotiations will be submitted to the people through a referendum.

On these terms, do you give the government of Quebec the mandate to negotiate the proposed agreement between Quebec and Canada? Yes. No."

The debate on the question, which was given wide television coverage throughout Quebec, was predictably repetitive but intense and emotional as well. French-speaking Quebecers are deeply, wrenchingly divided on the issue. Hatred and contempt for the other side are present in both camps and will likely flare even more fiercely on the hustings than they did in the television-lit parliamentary decorum of the national assembly.

The two major opponents in the referendum issue — the PQ and the Liberals — have so far adopted strikingly different campaign styles.

The PQ has gone public in a big way, fanning out throughout the province every weekend, holding meetings, introducing artists and performers, mayors, professionals, businessmen who have agreed to come forward and make public confession of their conversion to the Yes.

These 'notables' are often people who have not been previously associated with the PQ. Their testimonials and the revival meeting atmosphere helps create the impression that the PQ is winning widespread, non-partisan support for sovereignty-association, based on the natural solidarity of Quebecers rather than on party politics.

The Liberal style, in contrast, has been at the organizational level of the party. Liberals have not been beating the bushes for public support in all parts of the province, as PQ ministers have been doing every day. They have been staffing and organizing their riding associations, looking to their financing, preparing their publicity and information strategies.

Former Quebec Liberal cabinet minister, Kevin Drummond tells reporters he supports Levesque.

It is a much quieter approach, but one that has served Liberal leader Claude Ryan well in his brief career in politics. The federalist campaign will go public when Ryan believes the time is right.

After the first week of debate the federalist forces got a lift with publication of an opinion poll indicating that 52 per cent of Quebecers would vote No on the referendum, compared to 41 per cent who intended to vote Yes. Non-francophone Quebecers, 80 per cent for the No, offset the francophone vote, almost equally divided between the Yes and the No.

A week later another poll indicated a somewhat puzzling shift, with 55 per cent of francophones declaring for the Yes and 35 for the No. Total figures showed about 47 per cent Yes and 43 per cent No, with only about nine per cent undecided.

Both Levesque and Ryan have reacted with restaint to these polls, knowing that their will be many others before voting day and that what really counts is the actual vote on the referendum.

The premier and the leader of the official opposition are the heads of the two umbrella committees, one for each option, now being established.

Once the formal referendum campaign has begun, only these two national committees, according to the referendum law, can incur expenses "to support or oppose, directly or indirectly, an option submitted for popular consultation." Technically this means that Prime Minister Trudeau or any other federal member can participate in the referendum campaign only as part of the No committee, headed by Claude Ryan. Referendum spending is to be limited by law to about $2 million for each option, half of which will be paid for by the state.

Under the law dealing with the referendum, May 14 would be the earliest possible date for voting, June 16 the latest.

The televised debate in the national assembly offered a rare opportunity for the Parti Quebecois to sell sovereignty-association to the Quebec people. And the Pequistes did not waste their chance.

A small army of civil servants worked for weeks preparing speeches packed with statistics showing how Quebec is a loser in Confederation. As much as possible, the figures were drawn from federal government reports.

Each speech was approved by government house leader Claude Charron before it was delivered, and every PQ MNA was given a specific task.

Some appealed to a particular region of Quebec to vote 'yes' by showing how the region had been neglected by Ottawa. Others talked about the social or cultural or economic injustices of federalism.

And every PQ MNA got a little coaching from professional consultants on how to look convinicing in front of the cameras.

The three-week debate was a political show for the PQ, a charu to reach the people who still haven't made up their minds how to vote or to switch the votes of wavering federalists.

The strategy was clear: attack Liberal leader Claude Ryan's proposals for renewed federalism as a "sell-out" and convince Quebecers that a 'No' vote would bury constitutional change forever.

Premier Levesque used a reassuring tone in his opening speech. Trying to counter arguments by Ryan that sovereignty-association would break-up the country, Levesque said: "A 'yes' in the referendum . . . does not mean the abolition of Canada."

"A yes means the assurance, finally, of a breakthrough. It means an opening for change that grown out of the development and maturation of an entire people."

"It means a clear proclamation of a desire for equality — an equality that is more than a mere word on paper."

And what would a 'no' vote mean for Quebec?

It would leave Quebecers "shut up in themselves, obsolete, clutching to a sick fear of responsibility and an incapacity to face the future," said Levesque.

"For many generations, it would mean the impossibility of being taken seriously by anybody."

Public opinion polls have shown that although Quebecers reject independence they react favorably to the concept of "the equality of peoples." And so the Parti Quebecois milked that concept for all it was worth during the debate.

Never clearly spelling out that sovereignty-association would mean an independent political state in Quebec, the PQ orators talked about "equality" the same way they might talk about motherhood and apple-pie.

It's an over-simplified but seductive argument that is difficult for the federalist side to rebut.

But the PQ used more than mere sophistry to make its case. Cultural Development Minister Camille Laurin used a raw, straight-to-the-gut approach that dredged up bitter memories of Quebec's history.

"Quebec will vote 'yes' because it prefers equality over subordination, dignity over repression, freedom over trusteeship, a leap forward rather than a step back, pride over humiliation, majority status over minority status, prosperity over federal pittances, a place in the forefront of free nations rather than the ghetto in which it has been shut up by the federal regime."

Throughout the debate, the Liberals and other federalists in the assembly hammered away at the deceit of the referendum question and the hidden motive of the Parti Quebecois.

Ryan set the tone at the beginning when he described the question as "vicious, dishonest and unacceptable . . . a monumental fraud." He said the question proposed by the PQ was an attempt to camouflage its real intent, which was to make Quebec an independent country and "rupture the country that is Canada."

The Union Nationale, now reduced to five members since Rodrigue Biron resigned as leader and announced he would vote yes in the referendum, worked the same themes as the Liberals.

Opposition members attacked the sovereignty-association project as a synonym for separatism, unacceptable to the rest of Canada, an attempt by the PQ to make Quebecers think they could have all the benefits of independence while maintaining all the advantages of federalism.

'My No is Quebecois'

The Liberals had some difficulty countering the PQ's nationalist appeal, though many made emotional declarations about their attachment to both Canada and Quebec. "My No is Quebecois," is the Liberal slogan and the theme is that a good Quebecer can choose both Quebec and Canada.

The Liberals were also caught off guard by the PQ's coordinated barrage of statistics designed to prove that federalism does not pay, does not work and never will.

One government supporter after another rose to quote figures showing Quebec was getting the short end of the stick on everything from potato sales through railway mileage to auto production.

Liberal Reed Scowen delivered one of the most effective answers to these selective statistics. "We have 25 or 27 per cent of Canada's population here in Quebec," he said. "We have 52 percent of the aviation industry — a very high-level technology field. It is the other provinces that are disfavored on that score. We have 35 per cent of the Canadian pulp and paper industry, 34 percent of the chemical industry, 60 percent of the textile industry, 60 percent of the tobacco industry, 38 percent of the dairy industry and 33 percent of the pork industry."

Other Liberals rallied to the defence of federalism, both statistically and emotionally, occasionally scoring points.

Skewing metaphors

This dossier was opened when Diane Feinstein, mayor of San Francisco, complained that inequity in criminal sentencing was "a very hard blow to swallow." It grew when Sen. Lowell Weicker of Connecticut, speaking about the spirit of the American people, said, "It's vital to find out whether that spirit remains bright or whether we accept a little tarnish to keep the boat from rocking."

From journalism came the Journal of Commerce headline that the "slowdown is accelerating," and The Washington Post's editorial concern about whether — in the Iranian revolution — "at this advanced stage . . . the United States can fine tune the end game."

A subdivision of the file was set up to accommodate "metafives" — metaphors not so much mixed as mistaken. Mark Moseley, the underpaid place-kicker for the Washington Redskins, said, "They know I've been playing for peanuts for a long time. Now they're going to have to play the fiddle." Only if he had said what he meant — "pay the fiddler" — would he have successfully mixed a metaphor.

Similarly, Lowell Flanders, president of the United Nations Staff Association, was quoted on the front page of The New York Times as saying, "The career system is going down the pike." Writes Solomon Kunis of Bellerose, N.Y.: "The phrase Mr. Flanders intended to use (and probably did) was 'down the pipe' . . . derived from the irretrievable condition of material which has been flushed down a drain. 'Down the pike,' on the other hand, is related to 'down the road a piece,' and refers to a situation which one anticipates will occur further along, or some time in the future."

Another example of a metafive was supplied by Congressman Anthony Beilenson of California, who reports that a witness came before his committee to say, "We're embarking up a different tree."

These skewed metaphors are not to be confused with the mixed variety. A perfect example of metaphor mixture — almost fusion — was provided by Hazel Rollins, administrator of the Economic Regulatory Administration, who told a Senate Energy subcommittee that she had a big job and a small staff, and "there is no quick lunch here." Writes Guy Carruthers of San Francisco: "Apparently what Administrator Rollins meant to say was that 'there is no free fix,' but she backed away from that because of its narcotics connotation." With quick fixes, there can be no free lunch.

Metaphor lovers also collect word pictures in series: neither skewed nor mixed, but strung out like lights in a tunnel with no light at the end. Donald Adams, Republican Party chairman in Illinois, reviewed the post-New Hampshire primary scene and crowded his gallery with three sports metaphors in succession: "It's a yo-yo situation. We've had the second inning of a 38-inning ball game. Reagan did very well, but it's still a horse race."

The gentlest yet most effective way to put down a writer who mangles, mixes, or strings out his images is to draw a little cartoon of what he has written. Mrs. F. H. Nicoll of Princeton, N.J., sent me a drawing of a long needle, out of which a branch was growing incongruously; at the end of the branch was an apple — a person was tasting the apple, making a face and saying, "Yech!" She enclosed a clipping from a column of mine in which I chastised a Department of Justice official for being one who "reluctantly authorized the probe that is now bearing bitter fruit." Wrote Mrs. Nicoll: "This is the nearest I can get to a probe bearing bitter fruit."

Glitch

Herbert Berman, treasurer of the World Jewish Congress, came out of a White House meeting with President Carter to tell reporters of his puzzlement not only with policy, but with a word:

"We were told there was a glitch," he said of the president's explanation for the mistaken vote by the United States in the United Nations condemning Israeli settlements. "I haven't been able to find a definition of what a glitch is."

A glitch is a mechanical or electronic failure which — when it afflicts political campaigns — can cause great mischief. Carter remembers the word well: when he first travelled abroad as president in December, 1977, he whispered a suggestion to Secretary of State Cyrus Vance that he send "a cold, very blunt" letter to the Indian prime minister upon their return. The conversation was picked up by an open microphone nearby and caused a small diplomatic flap.

The malfunctioning — or, in that case, the functioning at the wrong time — of the machinery was defined in The Washington Star as a "glitch." An editor, unfamiliar with the relatively new slang term, changed the word in the second edition to "snafu," a well-known acronym from World War II armed-forces jargon, "Situation Normal, All Fouled Up" (euphemistic version). In most uses, a glitch is not as serious as a snafu. Recently, "foul-up" has overtaken "snafu," and carries the same weight of confusion as its root. ("Tuifu" — "the ultimate in foul-ups" — may be the origin of the noun.)

The man from the World Jewish Congress should not have been so puzzled at Carter's use of the term. "Glitch" probably originated in the German and Yiddish glitschen, meaning "slip," and, by extention, "error." According to the Polyglot's Lexicon, the term entered the language on gremlin-like feet in 1966, denoting a false signal or minor mishap in spacecraft.

Query

"You can always tell when people are not from Idaho," said a friend from Boise, "by the way they pronounce 'Boise.' The Idahoans pronounce it 'Boy-see'; the outlanders call it 'Boy-zee.'"

Recently, I referred to people who live on Guam as "Guamians," which caused some hilarity among Guamanians. For a piece on shibboleths, may I have some other examples of city pronunciations that separate the natives from the visitors?

Dear Madams

On the Op-Op-Ed page of The New York Times — that's the page opposite the Op-Ed page — a colleague has explored the problem of salutations to corporations. Now that women are often a part of the corporate structure, is "Gentlemen" enough? Should one try the apocryphal "Dear Sir or Madam as the case may be"?

The editorialist rejected "Gentlepersons" as silly, fretted about using company names, and decided, "We'll reluctantly stick with the traditional 'Dear Sir.'"

That's an editorial "we" that does not include us. The world of business has changed and the business of communication must change with it. I propose nothing drastic — the suggestion of Tom Deachman of Vancouver, British Columbia, that "Dear" be replaced by "Salu" is far ahead of its time — but just enough to pick up on the tempo of with-it management.

Since a corporation is like a person in the eyes of the law, correspondents should treat it like a person, not merely like a conglomeration of men and women. Certainly the men-only "Dear Sirs" or "Gentlemen" salutations are behind the times.

Helen Gurley Brown — I guess you might say she's that editor of Cosmopolitan magazine — agrees. "I think companies might be called by their first names," she writes in response to my query, "like 'Dear Bloomingdales,' 'Dear Citibank,' 'Dear Sardi's,' 'Dear Campbell Soup Company,' etc. Instead of 'Gentlemen,' you'd say, 'Dear Company Name.'"

I like that. Simple and direct, polite, neither arch or archaic. For familiarity and punchiness, I'd drop the "Company" or "Corporation," and salute with "Dear Ford Motor," or "Dear Pepsico." That applies to noncorporate entities: "Dear Department of Commerce," "Dear Common Cause." Courtesy demands that the full name be given: "Dear Wickersham, Cadwalader & Taft," not a breezy "Dear Wickersham."

Nothing beats a salutation that grabs the audience by the throat, mentioning the name or otherwise accu[illegible] object of the communication. Napoleon, addressing his massed troops, knew the way: "Soldiers!"

China gets tough

'One family, one child' enforced

By LINDA MATHEWS
The Los Angeles Times

PEKING — Untold thousands of Chinese women have been forcibly sterilized, or tricked into submitting to such operations, as part of the country's drive for zero population growth by the year 2000.

Forced sterilizations, reported by a wide range of Chinese women and confirmed by the official newspaper People's Daily, are the latest sign that China is increasingly adopting coercive methods to ensure that every baby born during the rest of this century is the only child in the family.

The government is so committed to the "one family, one child" goal announced last year that in many cities and rural areas local officials pressure young couples into signing a public pledge to have just one child — and then dock their salaries if they change their minds and have a second baby.

Coercive population control measures have backfired elsewhere, sometimes toppling the governments that perpetrated them. In India, the second-most-populous nation in the world after China, forced sterilizations were partly blamed for the 1977 collapse of Prime Minister Indira Gandhi's first government.

But China, with 970 million people by its own count and more than a billion by most foreign estimates, appears ready to risk some political unrest in the interest of stopping runaway population growth.

"There is nothing more important than controlling our birth rate," a front-page editorial in the People's Daily declared. "If we fail at this strategic task, it will be nearly impossible to transform ourselves into a modern and industrialized nation."

The ultimate Chinese goal is even more ambitious than zero population growth. They want to reduce their population to below current levels, in effect turning back the clock. A team of demographers and other scientists recently calculated, for example, that by adhering to the one-child goal for the next century, China could cut its population to 370 million, where it stood in the 17th Century.

Overzealous administrators, now under pressure from higher authorities to curb local birth rates, sometimes force women to submit to sterilization or order doctors to perform such operations on new mothers still anaesthetized from childbirth, according to first-person and press reports from the provinces.

A recent letter to the Xian Daily, a newspaper published in the capital of Shaanxi province, complained bitterly of "improper doings" in family planning clinics there. It said many women had been forced or tricked into sterilization operations, "causing both mental and physical pain."

A nation of brats?

PEKING — China's campaign for one-child families may produce a generation of spoiled brats, Chinee teachers and psychologists fear.

An article last week in the Shanghai newspaper Wen Hui Bao endorsed the new restrictions on family size but warned that kindergarten teachers are already complaining that many only children are so pampered by over-indulgent parents and grandparents that they do not fit into China's collective society.

The newspaper cited a six-month survey by Shanghai kindergarten teachers and psychologists that concluded that, without strict rules and "proper moral education" at home, an only child was more likely than a child from a large family to have behavioral problems at school.

The teachers voiced the same complaints about only children that are often heard elsewhere in the world — and usually disputed by the parents of such children.

"An only child is more likely to be fussy about what he eats and wears, careless with his property, bad-tempered and selfish," the Shanghai study said. "At the other extreme, an only child tends to be more timid than average and, because he is indulged at home, less able to take care of himself."

The newspaper said the behavior problems cropping up in schools, especially among 4- to 6-year-olds, did not justify abandoning the one-chile rule.

But "for the good of society," the newspaper urged parents to "stop pampering their only children and placing them at the centre of the universe."

An only child must be given new clothes only when the old ones are worn out, assigned chores around the house, even as a pre-schooler and required to share his toys and other belongings with neighbor children so as to "cultivate the collective idea," Wen Hui Bao said.

Western independents differ on joining U.S.

Any movement espousing Western Canada's union with the United States is born out of a basic feeling of inferiority, says Douglas Christie, chairman of the Western National Association.

"Inherent in that position is a sense of inferiority that we can't do it ourselves, that someone else has to do it for us."

For that reason, he said in an interview today, his group, which has supported Western independence for several years, has dissociated itself from those calling for union of Western Canada with the U.S.

"There is no reason to substitute the bungling foreign government in Ottawa for a similarly rigid, bureaucratic and more foreign one in Washington," said Christie, a Victoria lawyer.

He made the statement while commenting on a meeting he had here last week with Richard Collver, former leader of the Saskatchewan Conservative party who announced two weeks ago he was leaving his party to sit as an independent in order to work for union with the U.S.

Christie said they had a cordial meeting with both expressing a common understanding of the problem.

But they have different objectives in mind for improving Western Canada's lot.

The door is always open for future communications with those supporting Collver, Christie said "but our position is very firm."

He said it is regrettable that Collver and those who believe in his cause don't have the confidence to join with the Western National party in support of an autonomous Western State.

Christie said based on his five years of experience in the Western independence movement, he doesn't see much support swinging toward Collver.

Collver, on the other hand, says he's received unbelieveable support from the western provinces.

Homework for lawyers: Williams

British Columbia lawyers are just going to have to buckle down and do their homework, Attorney General Allan Williams said today.

Williams has no intention of delaying proclamation of the province's new revised statutes until a handy index is ready.

The B.C. branch of the Canadian Bar Association has complained that without the index, lawyers will have to spend extra time going over the revised laws to find relevent sections.

Time means money and clients will have to pay millions of dollars in extra costs, the association claimed.

Willimans says the lawyers do not have a legitimate complaint.

"There have been some changes made but I can't imagine any lawyer having difficulty using the revised statutes," Williams said.

"They're just going to have to do some work to re-acquaint themselves with statutory law."

Williams also points out the lawyers themselves have been calling for statute revision and the job has been going on for 2½ years.

The revised statutes will be proclaimed May 1, as scheduled.

Work is continuing on the index and it will be released as soon as possible after May 1, Williams said.

Barrett offers answer

WHITE ROCK (CP) — The NDP's Financial Institutions of British Columbia Act has been offered as a solution to the province's housing crisis by provincial leader Dave Barrett.

Barrett said Saturday night that the bill, passed by the NDP when it was government, should be proclaimed and $1 billion should be put into mortgages to produce housing for British Columbians.

He said the intention of the act is to permit people to use their own money out of the province's general revenues and put it into the mortgage field at lower interest rates than offered by banks.

Aircraft museum seeking home

Anyone with a fondness for old aircraft who has a large empty building, preferably a warehouse, can do Mike Gatey of Colwood a big favor.

Gatey, a freelance bush pilot, is a member of the Canadian Museum of Flight and Transportation.

He'd really like to find a home for a few of the old aircraft the museum has retrieved from scrap piles across the country.

The museum is based in Vancouver and has about 25 old aircraft in various stages of deterioration, including a WACO biplane, a Mosquito, a PB4Y2 Privateer and several moths, including a Tiger, a Leopard and a Hornet.

Although the museum hopes to locate at Boundary Bay Airport near Vancouver, it will settle for a suitable building in Victoria where some of the salvaged aircraft could be brought for repairs and rejuvenation.

The local branch will hold a display in the Mayfair Mall May 26-31. Displays by Trident and other aircraft companies will be featured and there will be draws for prizes, including rides in a P-51 Mustang, helicopter trips over the city, rides in open cockpit aircraft and introductory flying lessons.

Anyone interested in joining the museum and restoring old aircraft or who has a spare building should contact Gatey at 478-4451.

The heavy construction on Pandora Avenue will be crossing Douglas Street starting the week of March 24. This will take place for approximately four weeks, and is due to storm drain construction. We regret any inconvenience which may be incurred.

U.K. Labor infiltration story a hot potato

By JANE O'HARA
FP News Service

LONDON — U.K. political circles are still buzzing after the release earlier this month of a previously hushed-up report revealing that a radical left-wing sect of Trotskyists had infiltrated both the country's trade unions and the British Labor party itself.

The 450-page, five-pound report, prepared in 1975 by Lord Underhill for labor's national executive committee, described the aims and techniques of a group called Militant Tendency. According to Underhill, the group has 2,000 members and a stronghold in one out of ten constituencies in Britain. Based on militant tendency documents in Underhill's possession, however, they are still a long way from their stated goals. That is, to organize the rank and file trade unionists and laborites into a revolutionary party; the first step on the road to world revolution.

"They have buried themselves right within the Labor party," said Underhill, who has published the report at his own $1,250 expense. "I don't think they will ever take the Labor party over, but they will hurt us electorally."

The militant tendency is not a new addition to Britain's political spectrum. It has been around since the early 1960s, when it parted company with the revolutionary Communist party and for many years has been little more than an annoying tick in the party's thick hide. In the last five years, however, it has made a considerable mark on the Labor party's young Socialists and claims to have been responsible for ousting a former Labor cabinet minister, Reg Prentice, from his constituency last year.

The Labor party's constitution stipulates that people are not eligible for membership if they also belong to political organizations "having their own programs, principles and policies for distinctive and separate propaganda." Under these guidelines, members of the militant tendency qualify to have their Labor memberships revoked, not only are they a national political organization, they also have their own newspaper; a weekly rag with an estimated circulation of 9,000 called The Militant, which prints the party's propaganda.

The guru of the tendency and editor of The Militant, Ted Grant, operates the paper out of a converted factory in London's East End, which is protected with wire grills over the windows, heavy locked doors and a sophisticated alarm system. Friday, he maintained that the documents on which the Underhill report was based "were forgeries by the CIA." However, he further commented that," the tendency has supporters in 100 or more constituencies and in fact, we probably have influence in 200."

According to their own press releases, the militant tendency has a four-point party platform advocating: a 35-hour week with no reduction in pay.

Raw milk fans protest

DUNCAN — A group representing more than 60 persons supporting the sale of raw milk hopes to meet with Premier Bennett here tonight when he arrives for the opening of the Cowichan-Malahat Socred constituency offices on Kenneth Street.

The delegation is protesting a decision by the agricultural ministry preventing dairyman Robin Robson from selling raw milk from his five-cow herd without a licence.

Robson has been told in a letter from Agriculture Minister Jim Hewitt the province has no intention of altering legislation on raw milk because it "poses a significant threat to public health". As a result he has been dumping up to 35 gallons each day.

But more than 60 Cowichan area consumers of raw milk met recently to form their own organization, Action for Raw Milk.

3 seniors' groups get grants

The centre will serve 800 seniors, offering a program of crafts, hobbies, lectures, games, physical exercises, music and a monthly newsletter. Robert G. Scott is the group's president.

The Oak Bay Concert Orchestra receives $4,710 to expand its program of concerts to include various senior citizens' centres and nursing homes on Vancouver Island.

The Victoria West Lawn Bowling Club will get $2,696 to upgrade and maintain the bowling green property.

Begin plans increased child benefits

OTTAWA (UPC) — Health Minister Monique Begin says the Liberal government may re-assess tax exemptions which favor the wealthy, abolish them and direct the money into special programs such as doubling the child tax credit.

"During the time in opposition, we did a lot of work into the income tax system and discovered a hidden tax budget of about $30 billion that also includes tax breaks which I think should be killed," said Miss Begin in a weekend radio interview.

Miss Begin, reappointed to her former cabinet position as health and welfare minister by Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau, said money from the tax breaks should be "directed into special programs, especially into doubling the child tax credit."

She said she would take her proposal — giving families earning less than $19,620 in 1979 a benefit of $436 instead of the current $218 — to the cabinet for approval.

Miss Begin said there are "goodies" offered by the tax system to the wealthy. "The wealthier you are the best it is for you."

Included in the minister's list of tax exemptions for the wealthy which she wants re-examined are those for the aged, the married, children and corporations.

"These should be re-assessed in terms of social policy," she said. "They're worth hundreds of millions of dollars."

She said the Liberal government would probably scrap proposals made by former Conservative health minister David Crombie to abolish the universal family allowance program. "I said no thank you very much. That was that," she said.

The Liberal government will also continue to index family allowances and old age pensions to increases in inflation, she said.

New checks face poisons

OTTAWA (CP) — Environment department officials say the government plans to revise existing legislation to give it the power to assess possible hazards associated with new toxic chemicals before they are imported or marketed here.

Jim Brydon, head of the contaminants control branch, said in a recent interview the department is limited under the Environment Contaminants Act to obtaining information about possibly toxic substances only after they have been marketed in the country.

The proposed changes will answer in part criticism by a federal scientific advisory group which says existing laws are not adequate.

Scientists estimate at least 40,000 chemicals are in commercial use. Another 1,000 are added to the market each year.

Herbicide disposal? Spray it!

OTTAWA (CP) — Ontario's environment minister says he has decided to douse the province with more than 160,000 litres of a herbicide said to contain toxics before he bans it for good.

Harry Parrott said Friday he is lifting the temporary ban on the chemical, 2,4,5-T, he imposed last spring to get rid of $707,000 worth of it in storage across the province.

He said there is no known way to destroy it, so the easiest way to dispose of it is with a spraying program.

certain exactly how he's going to accomplish what he's set out to do, but his first targets are politicians.

"When you tell them about a problem, too many politicians say 'What can I do?' If you did that on a job you'd be out on your butt."

Woolford is convinced the government is going to be forced to take action, but it doesn't diminish his disgust.

"The thing that really infuriates me is that before an election politicians come to you on their hands and knees," he said. "After an election, they don't pay any attention to what's happening to you."

"People are losing their homes and there's no reason for it. It's sadistic, immoral and unreasonable."

The problem is affecting doctors, lawyers, truck drivers and garbagemen.

"It's right across the board."

In the old days, 25-year, locked-in mortgages were the norm, he said, and when banks and mortgage companies introduced open mortgages nothing was done because homeowners had no representation.

He's positive his protest movement will evolve into a national homeowners' association with considerable political clout.

Why did Ena Curran, whose Saanich is mortgaged at 11 per cent for the next four years and two months, bother to get involved?

"If I had to go up for remortgaging right now I don't know what I'd do," Curran told the Times. "I feel sorry for anybody who's looking for mortgage money right now."

So with Viv Woolford's words ringing in her ears, Curran got involved.

"I'm very angry."

She remembered there used to be a law limiting interest rates.

It was an anti-loan shark law, but it seems to have been lost in the shuffle.

"I'm for the majority, and the majority is in trouble," Curran claimed.

Her husband works in electrical maintenance at the University of Victoria, she works at a part-time job six days a week, and her two children, a 19-year-old boy and a 15-year-old girl, also work.

"They know we can't give them any money."

Curran isn't battling high interest rates on such things as cars or heavy taxes on liquor and tobacco.

"I smoke, but I say, let everybody pay for their bad habits."

She explained that a person doesn't have to smoke or drink or buy a new car; there's always the bus system or making the old family bus do another year.

"But when it hits the roof over our heads, that's it."

So she's out gathering names for Woolford's petition, and she's ready to do more to help the cause.

She noted the difficulty in getting some people to talk about problems in Victoria because so many in the city work for government.

It takes letters — to MPs, MLAs, to local politicians — to get your point of view across, Curran said.

In case you're wondering

Please tell me the story on the amethyst blocks in some sidewalks in town. They intrigue me and I have not been able to get an explanation.

You've been wondering about a fairly common means of admitting light to cellars of downtown commercial buildings around the turn of the century and later.

Many have disappeared with sidewalk reconstruction, especially where there is alternative shipping access. But in Victoria and some other cities front door deliveries were necessary because few commercial blocks were served by lanes or other means of access.

City archivist Ainslie Helmcken said the first ones in Victoria were installed by the Hudson's Bay Co. for its old waterfront warehouse, now demolished.

The panels consisted of a checkerboard of lenses something like square milk bottle bottoms held in a steel or cast iron frame that could be cemented into the sidewalk.

The city gave permission for basements to be extended to curbside in order to give the required access. In most cases a sidewalk elevator was installed to raise and lower goods, and covered when not in use by the steel doors remaining in several Douglas Street locations.

Helmcken said the glass was usually blueish or green-tinted, possibly to make it difficult for passersby to see through. And the shape was to focus and disseminate light into the cellar.

Some might be going on 100 years of age, and though often chipped or shattered, continue to serve as skylights in the sidewalks of Victoria.

If your interest has been aroused by some feature of Victoria — or even some oddity — write to Wondering, Victoria Times, 2621 Douglas.

City tackles $10M budget hike

Victoria city council today sharpened the knife to begin paring a provisional budget for 1980 of $41,516,585 — up $10 million from what the city actually spent in 1979.

Finance committee chairman Ald. Frank Carson said council's aim should be to hold the line on the mill rate, which last year was 102.325 mills, down more than 1½ mills from 1978.

That would mean cutting $3.6 million out of the provisional budget prepared by city comptroller Mason Sheldrick and department heads, to bring in a no-tax-increase budget of about $38 million.

It does not preclude the possibility of a mill rate hike due to other jurisdictions increasing their spending. The school board faces a 2½-mill increase dictated by the provincial government before it decides on its own spending plans, and there could be extra charges by the Capital Regional District.

Carson noted that the total assessment in the city this year is $312.5 million, up $22.7 million from 1979, which will produce 7.6 per cent more revenue for Victoria even if council manages to freeze the mill rate at last year's figure.

"I think the objective should be to hold the mill rate," he said.

"That's our goal," said Mayor Bill Tindall.

If the mill rate doesn't change, the owner of a home assessed at $70,000 will have to pay net taxes — after deducting the home-owner grant — of $760. Each increase of one mill will add about $10 to that amount.

Today council reviewed public works and highways spending plans. City engineer John Sansom said the department is asking for $4.1 million, up about 30 per cent from 1979.

The traffic department accounts for about $350,000 of the increase. There is also a 247 per cent increase in the amount the city proposes to spend on local improvements — new gutters, curbs and sidewalks for streets without them — where local property owners pay 80 per cent and the city 20 per cent.

This year, $326,205 has been budgeted, compared with $132,110 last year.

Appeal likely in outfall case

Attorney-General Allan Williams is waiting for his staff to report on a landmark B.C. Supreme Court ruling but indicated today an appeal is likely.

The judgment Friday by Mr. Justice John Bouck in effect ruled invalid a long-standing procedure of appeals to cabinet against the rulings of such quasi-judicial provincial bodies as the Pollution Control Board.

The Bouck judgment found the cabinet had exceeded its powers when it countermanded a decision by the PCB and approved a sewage outfall at Esquimalt Lagoon.

The judge said only federally-appointed courts have the constitutional power to take such action.

"If that decision is so far-reaching as indicated in the press reports, then perhaps there will be an appeal," Williams said.

One member of the attorney-general's staff has called the decision astounding, but the minister refused to be shocked.

Lawyers suggest as many as 60 provincial statutes could be affected by the ruling.

Boy, 9, plucked from pool

A small boy pulled from the bottom of Crystal Pool Saturday was revived by lifeguards and is in good condition, Crystal Pool manager Bill Young said today.

Young said the nine-year-old swimmer was taken to Victoria General Hospital as a precautionary measure and later released.

The accident occurred in the deep end of the pool about 2 p.m. when the boy failed to surface after a dive.

"He was diving in the water and one time he just didn't come up," said Young.

The child spent about 15 seconds under water and was given artificial respiration.

Young said the pool has a "fair number of pullouts" each month but this was the most serious incident in some time.

One dies, five hurt when car hits tree

One man was killed and five other persons seriously injured when a car hit a tree at 6:15 a.m. Sunday on Cedar Hill Road near Jennifer.

Dead is Charles P. Gallagher, 31, of 1260 Fort.

Saanich police said the car was driven by Sean Moore, 18, of 1680 Poplar.

Moore, listed in critical condition earlier, is now in fair condition at Royal Jubilee.

The other passengers were admitted to Jubilee or Victoria General Hospital with undetermined injuries.

They are John D. Graham, 26, of 2326 Howard; James Ross-Nutt, 19, of 252 Gorge; Brian Young, 19, of 3085 Cadboro Bay, and Krista Herret, 17, of 3337 Shelbourne.

There were only light injuries in an accident Saturday but damage was heavy when a loaded trailer and three other vehicles collided at Blanshard and Finlayson.

Police estimated $10,000 total damage, including contents of the trailer which strewed household furnishings, groceries and personal effects over the street.

A cleanup crew spent more than hour tidying up while four persons were checked for minor injuries at hospital.

Ralph Berger of Abbottsford, owner of the trailer, was towing it with a flatbed truck. The other vehicles involved were a pickup truck, a station wagon and a foreign compact sedan.

Hockey players back at school after bout with mystery illness

Members of a Victoria-Esquimalt peewee hockey team struck with sudden illness on the ice of a New Westminister arena Saturday are back at school today and feeling fine.

The mother of one of 14 players of the John Clarke Refrigeration team taken to hospital complaining of nausea, dizziness and weak legs said the boys are now suffering only slight headaches and a bad case of fright.

B.C. Hydro is investigating but has not discovered the cause, thought at first to be a leak in Moody Park Arena's ammonia system.

Sixteen 11- and 12-year-old players, coach Rod Lundgren and a referee were affected. The victims were taken to Royal Columbian Hospital after they became ill in the first period of an exhibition game.

"One boy fell down, one started to cry and others complained they were short of breath," the team spokesman said.

Two players, Rick Quinlan and Scott McIlroy, were kept overnight for observation but returned home with the team Sunday.

The illness struck the entire Victoria-Esquimalt team but only one member of the other team, the New Westminister Blazers. Victoria-Esquimalt players were warming up on the ice an hour before their opponents arrived.

Trio arrested at noisy party

Three men were arrested — one for obstructing a policeman — when Victoria police were called to a house party at 1568 Vining early today.

Two men were detained for breach of the peace and later released but one was charged with obstructing.

Offices rifled

Fourth-floor offices of Park Pacific Realty in Harbor Towers were broken into and rifled during the weekend. The burglary was reported at 10 a.m. Sunday and $150 in coins, a tape recorder and two slot machines were missing.

Weekend storm sends four boats to bottom

Four boats sank, one of them off Trial Island, in a storm that hit the Victoria-Vancouver area Saturday.

A 22-foot sailboat grounded and sank off Trial Island about 4:30 p.m. Saturday. Owner Derek Cash could not be contacted today.

A Pacific Rescue Co-ordination Centre spokesman said two other unidentified persons were on board.

Oak Bay provincial emergency program volunteers picked one person out of the water. The other two spent the night on the island.

A 16-foot klinker pleasure craft sank six miles off the Iona jetty on the mainland about 6 p.m. Two people aboard were picked up by a passing tugboat.

A 24-foot sailboat was blown into the causeway of the coaling docks near Tsawwassen around 8 p.m. and the owner, Robert Halford, was rescued by a Canadian Coast Guard hovercraft.

A 38-foot Chris Craft with three people aboard grounded at the Kitsilano base on the mainland at 2:25 a.m. Sunday. All three were taken off by the Canadian Coast Guard vessel Mallard.

The rescue centre handled 53 incidents during the weekend.

ICBC rebate cutoff doesn't fit facts: private insurers

The private insurance industry can't understand why the Insurance Corporation of B.C. has cut off its $50 rebates for first-time drivers who take a special defensive driving course.

"It's weird," said Brian Stanhope, manager of the Insurance Bureau of Canada's Vancouver office.

"ICBC seems to go against actuarial findings."

He noted that the corporation claimed the incentive did not produce drivers who were any more careful or less prone to accidents. But the private insurers' experience is just the opposite, Stanhope said.

For years, private auto insurers elsewhere in Canada have given a 15 per cent discount on premiums to young first-time drivers who take an accredited instruction course, he said.

And he pointed out that ICBC has proposed to give a 20 per cent discount to senior citizens, but there are no statistics which prove they are any less of a risk because of their age.

"There doesn't seem to be any relation betw[illegible] surance and ICBC," Agriculture Minister Jim Hewitt, who is responsible for ICBC, and corporation spokesman Bev Penhall both said today the corporation axed the program because it wasn't paying off.

"They are not getting value for their dollar because the accident rate is the same for those who passed the course as for those who haven't," said Hewitt.

Reporters pointed out that ICBC has promoted the course in past years as a useful program, but now was changing its mind.

"I would suggest everything has value," said the minister.

"Why do people have to be encouraged by a carrot to take a driving course? If they feel it's worthwhile they have the right to go out and take the course. There is no need for having a bonus or reward."

Concerning those drivers who have amassed six points and are required to take the course, the minister said: "If you have six points then you should go out and take the course because at least in the course they keep telling you you're not supposed to speed or drive carelessly."

Penhall said ICBC made the decision reluctantly. It will affect about 10,000 new drivers a year and will save about $500,000 annually.

"We're doing this with a great deal of regret. We'd love to give $50 back to persons if we thought it resulted in safer drivers. To our regret it didn't work."

He said that statistics compiled by the Motor Vehicles Branch since the program's beginning in 1974 have shown no difference in numbers of accidents or penalty points assessed between those who have taken the course and those who learned to drive on their own.

ICBC had no comparative figures on severity of accidents, he said, because it is an uncertain indicator of driver fault. Slow-moving vehicles can cause fatalities while other drivers can walk away from a head-on collision that wrecks their cars.

The corporation is looking at other ways of spending money to reduce the accident rate among this category of drivers, Penhall said.

"We've told the driver training schools if they can come up with something that can work we'll be happy to participate. It's got to work or we'd be derelict in our duty."

Bank card profits dip, worse in U.S.

TORONTO (CP) — Canadian bank card operations are far less profitable now than they were a year ago, bankers say, but they are still better off than their U.S. counterparts.

The drop in Canadian card profits raises the possibility of another increase in the interest rate on credit card balances beyond the annual 21 per cent announced last fall.

However, Visa U.S.A. barely broke even in the third quarter of 1979 and the fourth quarter report is expected to show the program's first loss since it went nationwide in the late 1960s.

U.S. banks are taking steps to curtail credit card operations and one is attempting to sell off the card portfolio altogether.

W. R. Fithern, assistant general manager, Visa, for the Royal Bank of Canada, attributed the drop in bank card profits to the sharp rise in the cost of financing.

William Speers, director of the card services division of the Bank of Montreal, said his bank's Master Charge profits have also dropped, and for the same reasons.

"By and large, we find that Canadians are pretty prudent with the use of credit cards," Fithern said.

Videotape sales surge gives Sony 342% hike

TOKYO (AP) — Brisk sales of videotape recorders and television sets propelled Sony Corp. in the fiscal quarter ended Jan. 31 to a 342.6-per-cent earnings gain over levels a year earlier, Sony announced today.

The Japanese electronics company said the gain came despite sharply higher foreign-exchange losses caused by the recent rise in the value of the U.S. dollar against the yen.

Sony earned $79.06 million (U.S.) or 37 cents a share, in the first fiscal quarter, against $17.86 million, or eight cents a share, a year ago. Sales rose to $898.6 million from $608.7 million.

Foreign exchange losses widened to $16.5 million in the quarter from $9 million a year earlier.

Sony said it translated its results for both years at a rate of 247 yen to the dollar, approximately the current value. The dollar was worth 199.825 yen at the end of January, 1979.

Sony's television sales were $258.3 million in the quarter, up from $181 million a year before.

The company said it sold $189.1 million worth of videotape recorders in the quarter, up from $104.2 million in the 1979 first quarter. It said sales of video recorders and tapes accounted for 28 per cent of overall revenues.

A spokesman said Sony plans to raise video recorder production to the 95,000-a-month level from the current 70,000 by September in order to expand production to a rate of one million a year.

2 months' labor

TOKYO (AP) — A Japanese court sentenced two former managers of a chemical plant to two months at hard labor Monday for allowing the dumping of acid wastes that damaged engines of at least three ships in a busy harbor.

The titanium oxide plant had dumped more than 100 million tons of acid wastes during an 18-month period.

No training programs

TORONTO (CP) — Canadian industry is responsible for the shortage of skilled tradesmen, says the chairman of the Ontario Manpower Commission.

Don Pollock said the problem is not a lack of students wanting to become apprentices, but too few training programs within industry.

Speaking at a conference in which industrial training committees discussed a new federal-provincial program to increase training in the skilled trades, Pollock said 40,000 tradesmen will retire in Canada in the next five years, but current programs will train only 5,000.

"We have five years to act," he said. "If we don't do anything, Canada will become a highly-educated Third World country."

Under the new program, the federal department of employment and immigration will provide $20 million this year to help Canadian industry hire and train people in the skilled trades.

Inflation curbs at cross purposes

NEW YORK — So rapid has the pace of economic change become that new eras, which once spanned decades, now last only a few months. Early last October the U.S. Federal Reserve ushered in an era of practical monetarism. Paul A. Volcker, chairman of the Fed, made it known that henceforth the central bank would follow the advice of its monetarist critics, stop manipulating interest rates and concentrate on controlling the supply of bank reserves to check the inflation.

But inflation soared. So this month the Carter administration and the Federal Reserve went into a long huddle and came out with a new anti-inflation program. And the era of monetarism gave way to a new era, that might be termed creditism.

A horde of businessmen have descended on the Fed to try to find out what creditism is. Nancy H. Teeters, a governor of the Fed who is in charge of administering the credit controls, struggled with their questions, and wound up saying that life is both confused and unfair.

The oil companies wanted to know how to service their customers with less credit when the president's oil import tax will add 10 cents a gallon to prices and state taxes are also going up. The retailers asked how to live with a March 14 date for determining their credit ceiling when charge accounts grow by 40 to 50 percent above the mid-March level during the Christmas shopping season. Too bad, said Mrs. Teeters.

While some companies and individuals will struggle to escape the new credit strictures — some money market funds are cloning new funds that they hope will enable them to take on new customers, and many credit-addicted consumers will do a faster shuffle among their existing credit cards — the Fed's new creditism seems sure to bite.

Major banks, credit card companies and big retailers such as Sears and J.C. Penney have announced that they will be tightening credit to their customers and discouraging new borrowing. Is the end of the expansion at last nigh?

The great majority of economists certainly think so, but some are holding their breath to see whether the American consumer, still in the throes of acute inflationary expectations, frustrates them once again. Norman Robertson, senior vice president economic scene

By Leonard Silk

and economist of the Mellon Bank, insists that he has not yet seen any break in the pro-spending, antisaving mood of consumers and therefore suspects that the business expansion still has some distance yet to run. He thinks that the prime rate of interest the banks charge their best corporate customers could climb to 22 or 23 percent before it turns down.

Officially, the Mellon Bank does not forecast that the prime will go that high. Its most recent forecasting charts show the prime rate peaking this month at 20 percent — the rate has just hit 19 percent — and coming down to 15 percent by December.

The money markets are starting to act, however, as though they think the recession is just about here. While several major banks were raising their prime this week, money-market rates broke downward by over ½ percentage point.

It looks increasingly doubtful that, even with the persistence of consumer inflationary psychology, the economy can weather much longer the combination of tighter money, tighter credit, record interest rates, budgetary cuts, rising taxes, climbing oil and gasoline prices, a huge outflow of money to the oil-producing countries and declines in real personal income. Consumers and businesses are being hit with everything but the water bucket.

Although an economic slowdown seems all but certain, the economists don't know how much of a dent this will make in the rate of inflation — especially if people expect policy to swing from restraint to stimulus as soon as unemployment climbs above, say, 7 percent. The question skeptics are asking is, "Will the government stay the course?"

James Tobin of Yale University, who served as a member of President John F. Kennedy's Council of Economic Advisers, says, "If 'staying the course' until inflation is licked is indeed the strategy of the federal government, I think it should be made crystal clear to the country. Only if it is universally understood by the businesses and unions that set and negotiate prices and wages does it have a chance to succeed. This would require firm declarations jointly by the president, the Congress and the Federal Reserve."

These declarations, Tobin suggests, would have to specify for several years ahead the gradually diminishing limits on the growth of total-spending the government is committed to enforce.

But that strategy, he warns, might inflict serious damage on the body politic for half a decade if it is not backed by an "incomes policy" that would bring about a concerted disinflation of industrial wages and prices on a schedule consistent with over-all monetary disinflation.

But unfortunately the administration is moving the other way — it has just raised the wage guideline to the range of 7½ percent to 9½ percent, with still higher supplements possible, while it is tightening fiscal, monetary and credit policies. The result threatens to be both more inflation and more unemployment than if an incomes policy were moving in the same direction as macroeconomic restraints.

It's busy behind the takeover scenes

By LAWRENCE MOULE
The Canadian Press

Shopping for a multi-million-dollar corporation takes a bit more than does a trip to the neighborhood supermarket.

Corporate takeovers, which have become so commonplace in Canada they appear to be accomplished with no more effort than picking up the phone and calling for delivery, actually create bone-wearying work behind the scenes to sort out financial alternatives and legal requirements.

One executive who knows how demanding such work can be is W. R. (Bill) Fatt, 29, assistant treasurer of The Consumers' Gas Co in Toronto.

The company is on its way to becoming the fifth largest in Canada in terms of net income as a result of two acquisitions: Home Oil Co., Ltd. of Calgary last Dec. 13 and the pending takeover of Hiram Walker-Gooderham and Worts Ltd. of Windsor, Ont.

Consumers' and Hiram Walker announced last week their directors have signed a share-exchange agreement valued at about $1.22 billion which would make Hiram Walker a wholly-owned subsidiary of Consumers'.

Fatt worked on both the Home and Hiram Walker deals and, although he could not discuss the latter before it is approved by shareholders April 8, he recalled in an interview the events that brought Home into the Consumers' fold.

In 1971, Consumers' bought as an investment 52.5 per cent of the outstanding voting shares of Cygnus Corp. of Calgary, which held 43.5 per cent of the voting shares of Home Oil.

The investment grew and by the end of 1972, Consumers' owned 92.2 per cent of Cygnus and 49.6 per cent of the class B voting shares of Home. Its ownership of Home's over-all equity was 22 per cent.

Fatt said Consumers' continued to regard its stake in Home as an investment and bought no further voting shares but added to its holdings of class A non-voting shares until it owned 48.2 per cent of Home's over-all equity by March, 1979.

"At that point we had about $171 million invested in Home but it was an investment we could not make a lot of use of," Fatt said. "We could not borrow significantly against it and Home paid nominal dividends."

In May, 1979, Consumers' president William Wilder hired E. G. Warburg and Co., a merchant bank based in London, England, to review the Home investment.

"It became obvious that at a reasonable price it was worth while to go for the balance of the shares," Fatt said.

But how should it be done? A five-man executive committee was formed to build a structure for the takeover proposal.

The group concluded that to achieve optimum financial strength, Home and Cygnus should become wholly-owned subsidiaries of Consumers'. Shareholders of Home and Cygnus would be offered their choice of cash or preferred shares of Consumers' or any mixture of the two.

"We wanted to give Home shareholders equity participation in the new company," Fatt said. "Convertible preferreds gave that option."

How much should the offer be worth? To answer that question, Consumers' hired two Toronto investment dealers, Dominion Securities Ltd. and A. E. Ames and Co. Ltd.

They assessed the market values of the three companies and the impact of the proposed deal on Consumers' earnings and came up with a suggested value of $85 for each Home share and $26 for each Cygnus share.

All was ready by Aug. 15, when Consumers' asked the Toronto Stock Exchange to halt trading in its shares and also those of Home and Cygnus. Consumers' also issued a news statement saying it was considering making a proposal concerning the other two companies.

On the morning of Aug. 16, the proposal was presented to Consumers' board of directors in Toronto.

Fatt said the entire board had not been informed previously of what was going on, and "I am not sure they were all aware of the Warburg study."

The reason for that was simple; some board members of Consumers' were also on the boards of Home and Cygnus.

Ross Phillips, chairman of Home, was also a director of Consumers' and he was informed of the proposal immediately prior to the presentation meeting, Fatt said.

"Within a couple of hours, the board unanimously approved the proposal."

The same afternoon, board members of Consumers' who were also on the board of Home flew to Calgary to present the proposal to the entire Home board, who agreed to consider it.

With that done, and a public announcement with details of the proposal issued Aug. 17, Fatt and his associates plunged into more work.

They conferred with Richardson Securities of Canada Ltd. of Winnipeg, whom Home retained to assess the fairness of the offer. Home also hired two Calgary reservoir engineering firms, McDaniel Consultants (1965) Ltd. and Sproule Associates Ltd., to assess the value of Home's oil and gas reserves.

At the same time, Consumers' management started the mammoth job of preparing a document containing all information relevant to the proposal for shareholders of Home and Cygnus. The 175-page document was finally mailed Nov. 28.

The document had to be written extremely carefully, since it had to comply with regulations under the Ontario Securities Act and the Canadian Business Corporations Act and also of the Securities Exchange Commission in the United States, since Home Oil shares were traded on the American Stock Exchange.

On Oct. 29, at a meeting in Calgary, Consumers' top officers agreed to amend their proposal based on recommendations by Richardson. The value of the offer was increased to $95 for each Home share and $29.25 for each Cygnus share.

The directors of those companies agreed to the offer and directors of all three companies put the final seal of approval on the proposal Nov. 5.

On Dec. 20, shareholders of Consumers' and Cygnus approved the proposal in Toronto, followed the next day by approval by Home's shareholders in Calgary. Fatt said about 85 per cent of the Home and Cygnus shares were turned in for preference shares of Consumers' and the remainder for cash.

Total value of the accepted offer was about $406.77 million. But the actual cost to Consumers' was far greater.

Fatt said the company spent about $5.5 million on printing, legal fees, auditing fees, the cost of meeting regulatory requirements and fees paid to all the consultants. The fee to S. G. Warburg alone was $1.25 million.

Added to that was the incalculable cost of management time.

"Hundred-hour weeks were not unusual through the summer and fall. There were nights where we would work right through the night."

When it was over, an exhausted Fatt and his colleagues had little time to rest. The deal for Hiram Walker was brewing.

Help us control Unemployment Insurance costs.

Employers and personnel/payroll people – you can help us control unemployment insurance costs. How? By completing the Record of Employment form more accurately.

There are more than 650,000 employers in Canada. That's why even minor inaccuracies can add up to a lot. Last year, due to inaccuracies on the Record, there were over $100 million in unemployment insurance overpayments.

To help improve accuracy, we have introduced a new Record of Employment form. It is more detailed. And it is closely controlled by serial number. By filling it in accurately, you will help prevent underpayment or overpayment of unemployment insurance claims.

A guide, "How to complete the Record of Employment," is available to all employers. And we have instructed the people at Canada Employment Centres to pay special attention to your requests for information.

You can help us by ensuring the Record of Employment is completed accurately. Please make certain your personnel/payroll people understand the importance of the Record of Employment. It is the most important form in Canada's unemployment insurance program. It's so important, in fact, that prompt and accurate completion of the Record of Employment is a legal requirement.

If all Canadian employers help in this effort, we can improve control of Canada's unemployment insurance program.

Money Talk
A series in which Montreal Trust answers your questions.

"Deferred Profit Sharing Plan–what are the advantages?"

"What are the advantages of a Deferred Profit Sharing Plan to someone like myself with a small business?"

A Deferred Profit Sharing Plan (DPSP) is designed to keep your pre-tax profits where they'll do a lot of good, for your personal benefit and that of the key employees you select to participate in the plan. It provides them with a real incentive, but more than that, it promotes a feeling of interest and concern for your company's well-being.

There can be further advantages. Contributions made by the employer are completely tax deductible; if your company does not have a profitable year, you may limit your contribution to the minimum. The minimum annual employer contribution is the lesser of: 1% of the designated employee salaries; or $100 per employee per year; or 1% of the profits of the company, which could be no contribution in the case of a year with no profits.

What's more, the contributions to the plan are kept under strict control because the employer can select which employees will participate each year and no future liability is incurred. A DPSP gives you this flexibility, with the convenience of surprisingly little paperwork compared to other tax deferral vehicles.

Your employees gain an additional advantage in that by introducing a DPSP, they do not lose their $5,500 contribution limit towards their personal RRSP's, allowing for a total, potential $9,000 tax deferral.

To find out exactly how a Montreal Trust DPSP can benefit both you and your employees, talk to one of our officers.

Opening lead — seven of hearts.

Board No. 54 of the 1959 Italy-U.S. match was the most amazing deal of the tournament. The final contract at both tables was three notrump. The Italian South went down six! The U.S. South made five notrump! The contract would have failed against proper defense! And the U.S. team gained 760 points on the deal.

All these strange goings-on require some explanation. When Belladonna was declarer for Italy, he took the heart lead with the king and played the A-Q of clubs, which held, and then another club, won by Stakgold (East).

Stakgold led the five of hearts, on which Belladonna played a diamond! Harmon naturally thought East had the only missing heart and he therefore played the nine, dummy winning with the queen.

At this point, North asked Belladonna whether he had any hearts. Belladonna said yes, and the director was now called. He ruled, in accordance with the laws, that South could substitute the heart six for the diamond three, without penalty. Harmon was also allowed to change his play — as stipulated by the laws — from the heart nine to the heart ace.

But dummy's queen play could not be changed, since it was a legal play. So Harmon cashed five heart tricks and Belladonna finally went down six.

At the other table, Fishbein was South for the U.S. He won the heart lead with the king and also played the A-Q-J of clubs. East took the king and could have defeated the contract with a spade return, but he led a heart instead.

West won with the ace and returned a heart, thus presenting Fishbein with his ninth trick. Both defenders kept their spades as the clubs were run, and Fishbein won the last two tricks with the 7-5 of diamonds to conclude one of the weirdest hands in world championship history.

"A nice wedding group," said Stan, handing back the photo. "How long ago was that?"

Martha shook her head. "That would be telling, but maybe you could figure it out. If we'd been married twice as long it would be a third as many years as it actually is before we'd reach the 40-year mark."

How long had they been married?

WITH A BIG LAUGH, Lee Trevino tells PGA commissioner Dean Beaman to "give me the money" after winning the Tournament Players Championship at Sawgrass Country Club at Ponte Vedra, Fla., Sunday. Trevino won $72,000 for his one-stroke victory over Ben Crenshaw.

Lee swaggers home in pressure-filled test

PONTE VEDRA BEACH, Fla. (AP) — The pressure was applied immediately by two of the greatest players in the history of golf.

It was just what Lee Trevino needed.

"Jack Nicklaus and Gary Player both birdied the first hole and I'm thinking, 'Hey, they're coming at me in a hurry'," Trevino said. "That's what I need to play good. I like smoke. I've always liked pressure."

And, in one of the most pressure-packed tournaments in recent history — with most of the great names in the game taking a run at him at one time or another — the swaggering Trevino fired a front-running 70 that provided him with the title in the Tournament Players Championship on Sunday.

At one point, Nicklaus, Player, Tom Watson, Hubert Green, Ben Crenshaw and British Open champion Seve Ballesteros of Spain all shared second place, hot on Trevino's heels.

In the end, Trevino was the survivor. He was asked if he was surprised to outlast such an aggregation.

His eyebrows shot up.

"Hey, man, I'm one of the big boys, too. I'm not cotton candy sitting over here."

He proved to be the toughest of them all in the ambitious event that is billed as the annual championship of golf's touring pros. He started the final round with a one-shot lead and, though tied at one time or another, was never headed.

He finished with a 278 total, 10 shots under par. His total was a course record by five shots.

The win, Trevino's 23rd on the U.S. tour, was worth $72,000 from the total purse of $440,000. It marked the 13th consecutive season Trevino has won at least once.

Crenshaw took second.

It was worth $43,200 and made him the game's 25th man to reach $1 million in career earnings.

It's no joke if you don't win: Trevino

MIAMI (AP) - The lack of color, the dreary sameness of the faceless young men who seem to win PGA tour events with something approaching regularity, is of concern to commissioner Deane Beman.

An underlying theme of most of his recent public statements is that the press needs to promote them, make them more identifiable, bring out what elements of personality they may possess.

Their anonymity is one of the factors having an adverse effect on the all-important television ratings.

Beman's concern, however, is not shared by Lee Trévino, the tour's resident crowd-pleaser and premier gallery attraction.

"The only competition I have is Chi Chi (Rodriguez)," chortled the flamboyant Trevino, who has parlayed his mischievous, infectious grin, extrovert behavior and non-stop chatter into millions of dollars.

"I make twice as much money off the golf course as I make on it," Trevino said. And he's made well over $2 million playing the game.

He's been characterized as the only man in golf capable of 70 moments of intense, total concentration with those moments — when he strikes the ball — spread over four hours of comedy and one-liners.

"That's not true," said Trevino. "Nobody concentrates for four hours. You look out there. Between shots, they guys are laughing and talking and joking with each other.

"They do it among themselves. I do it with the gallery. I don't know why. Maybe they're more comfortable talking to each other. That's the way they are. I'm the way I am."

And golf is fortunate Trevino is the way he is. He's enriched the game. He now is firmly entrenched as part of golf's lore and legend; the humor of Trevino standing along with the temper of Bolt, the courage of Hogan, the surging charge of Palmer.

Some of it is myth, a myth generated by the galleries.

Trevino has learned well the lesson once voiced by Bob Menne, a former tour player and one of the world's genuinely funny men. A decade ago Menne was going through a comedy routine on a putting green. He was pretending to be, simultaneously, a hockey goalie and an French-speaking announcer. It was hilarious. Other pros were, literally, doubled over with laughter.

Suddenly, Menne stopped. He looked up, serious as could be, and asked:

"Now, wouldn't I be a funny guy if I started shooting 67s instead of 77s?"

"Yeah," said Trevino. "I played the tour in '67 and told jokes and nobody laughed. Then I won the (U.S.) Open in '68 and I'm telling the same jokes and everybody is laughing like hell.

"I keep going to the same towns every year, and seeing the same people on the golf course, and I'm still telling the same jokes and they're still laughing like hell.

"But you've got to be able to back it up with your sticks. If you're not winning, you're not funny."

And, Trevino said, his days as a winner are numbered.

"It's coming to an end," said Trevino, now 40. "I don't hit it as close to the flag as I used to. I don't putt like I used to. Hell, when [illegible] old you don't do anything like you used to.

"I've got maybe three, four, five more years. But it's inevitable. It has to end sometime. Age is gonna get you.

"And I'm not gonna fight it.

"When I can't break 74 or 75, and I know I can't break 74 or 75, I'm gone. I won't fight it."

And when it happens, golf will be the poorer for it.

Donna gets a wish

LAS VEGAS Nev. (AP) — A nine-year-old dream has come true for Donna Caponi Young.

Young fired a two-under-par 70 Sunday to earn a one-shot victory over Nancy Lopez-Melton in a $200,000 Ladies Professional Golf Association tournament.

Young had strived to win on the Desert Inn course since the 1971 Sealy Classic. In that tournament, Sandra Palmer holed a shot from a sand trap on the 18th hole to give her an eagle and a one-stroke win over Young.

"Because of what happened that year, I was determined to play well and win here," said the veteran, 35.

Play well she did. Young finished the 72-hole tournament with a score of 286 on rounds of 71, 74, 71 and her final-round 70 over the over 6,237-yard, par-72 layout. She earned $30,000.

With coach fired, Bruins get meaner

By The Canadian Press

With coach Fred Creighton missing from their corner, Boston Bruins have come out fighting.

"You just can't avoid that kind of contact and be a winner in this league," said Harry Sinden, the Bruins' general manager, after his souped-up charges thrashed Philadelphia Flyers 7-2 in National Hockey League action Sunday night.

Sinden took over behind the bench Saturday after firing coach Fred Creighton in Atlanta. The Bruins defeated the Flames later that day and flew home to Boston, where they merely got meaner.

There were 10 fighting majors assessed in the game — two each to Boston's Terry O'Reilly and Philadelphia's Jack McIlhargey.

"Forechecking and checking all over the ice — that's the forte of the Montreal Canadiens, the Philadelphia Flyers and the Boston Bruins," said Sinden. "And they've been the three best teams in this league for quite a while. If we are going to continue to win, we are going to have to check. There's no other way around it."

Elsewhere, Montreal Canadiens extended their undefeated streak to 15 games with a 6-1 win over New York Rangers, Minnesota North Stars made it five wins in a row with a 7-1 romp over Colorado Rockies, Quebec Nordiques dumped Vancouver Canucks 6-2, Pittsburgh Penguins defeated Winnipeg Jets 4-2, Chicago Black Hawks beat Atlanta Hawks 4-2 and New York Islanders and Buffalo Sabres tied 1-1.

In Vancouver, Goran Hogosta played his first game in more than three months and provided solid goaltending as Quebec took advantage of its few scoring opportunities to post the win. Hogosta kicked out 36 shots and the Nordiques got two power-play goals from centre Bob Fitchner.

Flyers' coach Pat Quinn reasoned that Creighton's firing left the Bruins with no other alternative but to play much tougher hockey.

"The players can't blame anyone now that the coach is gassed," he said. "They have to look into the mirror. There are no more scapegoats now."

Rick Middleton scored his 38th and 39th goals of the season for the Bruins, who scored three unanswered goals in the second period to break open a game that was tied 1-1 after 20 minutes of play. O'Reilly, Mike Milbury, Pete McNab, Al Secord and Bobby Lalonde added one each. Paul Holmgren and Bob Kelly replied for the Flyers.

Boston defenceman Ray Bourque drew an assist to tie a league record for rookie defencemen at 60 points.

Steve Shutt and Bob Gainey each scored two third-period goals and Guy Lafleur added three assists for the Canadiens in New York. Gainey also assisted on the game-winning goal by Doug Jarvis and had Montreal's first shorthanded goal of the season to help the Canadiens to their 12th win — with three ties — in the 15-game streak.

Colorado had 13 shots on net — the fewest ever by a Minnesota opponent in the team's 13 years in the NHL.

"They didn't do much wrong," observed Rockies' coach Don Cherry. "They appear to be peaking at the right time."

Steve Payne became the third player in North Stars' history to score 40 goals in a season.

Mark Johnson, a member of the U.S. Olympic championship hockey team, scored his first two NHL goals to spark Pittsburgh.

Grant Mulvey scored his 36th and 37th goals in a 16-second span in the third period to spark Chicago.

Jim Schoenfeld scored for the Sabres and Bob Nystrom for the Islanders in the first 13 minutes at Buffalo and goaltenders Bob Sauve of Buffalo and Billy Smith of New York played flawless hockey the rest of the way.

Won't be back: Ruel

MONTREAL (CP) — Claude Ruel, who took over as coach of Montreal Canadiens after Bernie Geoffrion resigned Dec. 12, says he won't be back behind the National Hockey League club's bench next season.

"The players have done a hell of a job," Ruel said of the team's turnaround since the departure of Geoffrion, "but I won't be back."

The Canadiens, who struggled under Geoffrion, have rebounded under Ruel and now are battling Buffalo Sabres for second place in the over-all standings.

"It has nothing to do with money," Ruel said. "I told you a long time ago . . . I told you many, many times that I wasn't interested in being a head coach here or anywhere else.

"You know why I came back. It was the thing to do. I had to do it. It was something I could contribute; but look — when you're a head coach they expect you to be perfect. Nothing else matters."

Ruel pointed to former Boston Bruins coach Fred Creighton's fate. He was fired Saturday.

"Look at Creighton. His team was injured all season. They didn't have Brad Park until about a month ago. They've been playing without Don Marcotte since December. Players were suspended, Wayne Cashman has been hurt, and Jean Ratelle.

"The team is in fourth place, and he's fired. Perfect — that's what a head coach has to be. I can't be perfect."

Stretch run disappointing for fast-starting Cougars

In like a Cougar, out like a lamb.

It isn't the way coach Jack Shupe wanted it, but that is how Victoria started and finished the regular campaign in Western Hockey League.

Cougars opened the season with 10 straight victories and at the halfway point, at Christmas, appeared well on their way to a first-place finish in the Western Division. But a stumbling March and Portland's surging run enabled the Winter Hawks to finish ahead of the Cougars.

It wasn't a good month. Dropping a 6-1 verdict to the Breakers in Seattle Sunday, Cougars wound up with a split of their March games, winning eight and losing six. Cougars are 5-5 for their last 10 games.

Three of the losses were handled by Seattle, a squad that obviously intends to be factor in the round-robin semi-final playoffs that get under way Wednesday.

Cougars make their first start Saturday, meeting Portland at Memorial Arena.

Sunday's result, sparked by Joe Ward's three-goal performance, was Victoria's fourth loss in its last six road games.

The Cougars looked better Saturday when they wrapped up their home campaign, scoring four goals in the first five minutes of play to defeat New Westminster Bruins 7-2.

The inconsistencies of the past month — a sputtering offense and shoddy defensive work — has to be a concern for Shupe. Particularly worrisome has been the play of centre Barry Pederson. The team's leading scorer failed to pick up a point in his last two games and finished with 52 goals and 87 assists for 137 points.

Seattle's six-goal spree against rookie Grant Fuhr, wrapped up league netminding honors for teammate Kevin Eastman. Fuhr finished a few percentage points behind Eastman, unofficially, 3.15 - 3.09.

In establishing club records for most points (102) and most victories (51), Cougars also enjoyed a banner year at the gate. Saturday's crowd of 2,765 boosted Victoria's overall attendance at Memorial Arena to 104,084 for 36 homes games.

Lethbridge, beaten by Calgary 6-4, gained the final Eastern playoff spot from Saskatoon as Billings downed the Blades 7-4.

Seasprays weather storms

They found the opponents a little rougher and the fields a bit more bumpy but Victoria Seasprays still managed to win a pair in Seattle on the weekend and stretch their unbeaten streak in the Pacific Northwest Field Lacrosse League to 10 games.

With Kevin Alexander scoring four goals Sunday, the Seasprays defeated Oak Parlour of Seattle 16-10.

Jim Lynch scored three and Jeevan Dillon two for the Victoria club which led 7-5 at half time. The other goals came from Tom Woods, Bill Marechek, Mike Thomas, Art Webster, Ron Brown, Tarey Pollock and Ron MacNeil.

Manager George Grover described Sunday's contest as "the roughest we've had so far" and said the field was very bumpy and chewed up after a rugby tournament.

On Saturday, the Seasprays ran into some tough opposition when they met Seattle Lacrosse Club, ranked No.1 in the Northwest States, but managed to come away with a 16-12 win.

Alexander again led the scoring with five goals and Lynch had four.

JBAA rallies to win Monterey tourney

Times News Services

MONTEREY, Calif. — James Bay Athletic Association of Victoria came from behind on winger Jamie Attenborough's 60-yard scoring run in the second half Sunday to beat Australia's Eastern Suburbs club 20-13 in the championship game of the annual Monterey national invitational rugby tournament.

James Bay became the first Canadian winner of the title since 1959, when a team from Vancouver won the inaugural tournament.

Eastern Suburbs, from Sydney, went ahead 13-10 on a dropkick and penalty goal early in the first half. But James Bay, dominating the set play with its big forward pack, went ahead as Attenborough broke two tackles and ran for his try which made the score 14-13.

Dan Hemmingway made the victory margin greater by scoring a late try which was converted by Murray Allen. James Bay's other points came from a first-half try by Tim White and two penalty goals kicked by Allen.

James Bay, the Monterey runner-up two years ago, advanced to the final of the 32-team competition by beating the Old Gaels 3-0, Stanford University 22-0, University of California at Berkeley 20-3 and Los Angeles Rugby Club 10-9 in the semi-final on Saturday.

Vancouver Rowing Club and Oak Bay Wanderers both competed in the tourney, with the Wanderers finishing 11th.

James Bay forward Gary Johnston, dropped by selectors recently from the Island Crimson Tide Reps which lost their McKechnie Cup game to UBC, was named the tournament's most valuable player.

Dennis Summerhayes won the Shinook Club's annual Frostbite Derby held in Saanich Inlet Sunday with a 10-pound, six-ounce sakmon. Les Leacock, with a six-pound, four-ounce catch, was second.

Smith takes second, Haslam third in 150

ANDERSON, Calif. — Victorians had a big day in the Norcal 150 for open stock cars Sunday.

Roy Smith, driving a J.R. Edgett Camaro, finished second to Ron Eaton of Tacoma in the 150-lap race while Roy Haslam, driving a '69 Camaro John Copp Special, was third.

Smith's car was the only one not lapped by Eaton.

The race was marred by a spectacular crash on the second lap when four of the 22 starting cars were eliminated.

Smith's next start will be in the Western 200 for Grand National cars at Ontario, Calif., April 16.

It is likely that Haslam also will enter.

Bower captures Olympic trial race

Steve Bower of Ontario Sunday won an 87-kilometre road race on the Saanich Peninsula for cyclists attending the Canadian Olympic team training camp at Shawnigan Lake and for other B.C. riders.

UVic's other win came in the women's events where the Victoria crew won the women's novice fours with a time of 4:15.28 over the 1,000-metre course. Seattle Pacific University was second in 4:19.28 and UBC third in 4:37.76.

As well, UVic crews placed second in three events — the men's senior novice eights, the women's junior varsity eights and the women's novice eights — and third in one event — the men's lightweight eights.

Dunstone needs two extra ends

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld. (CP) — Jim Dunstone of Winnipeg needed two extra ends and his last rock advantage coming home to win the Canadian mixed curling championship Sunday.

Dunstone and his Winnipeg crew defeated John Fortier of Charlottetown 7-4 when they counted three in the last end.

Dunstone was ahead 4-2 coming home in the 10th but Fortier tied it with the only two-point end of the game.

Dunstone blanked the 11th when he fired heavy weight through a tiny hole to clear out the P.E.I. shot rock but was unable to save his shooter.

Fortier tried to hide a shot behind a cluttered-up front in the 12th end, but his final draw rubbed a front stone and veered to the open side of the house and all Dunstone had to do was hit the rock for the win.

Dunstone finished first in the six-day round-robin with a 9-2 record while Fortier, who finished in a two-way third-place tie with Newfoundland had to win a tie-breaker with Toby MacDonald of St. John's and a semi-final with B.C.'s Bob McCubbin.

MONCTON, N.B. (CP) — Skip Kristian Soerum, who directed Norway to key wins over Canada in 1979 and 1978, gets an opportunity today to spoil the debut of Saskatchewan's Rick Folk in the men's world curling championship.

Soerum, representing Norway for the fifth consecutive year, won the title in Switzerland last year when he defeated Peter Attinger of the host country.

That was Norway's first world men's title and it was set up when he eliminated Barry Fry of Winnipeg in semi-final play. In 1978 at Winnipeg, Soerum pulled the same trick against Canada's Ed Lukowich but Bobby Nicholls of the United States defeated the Norwegian in the final game.

"After playing Soerum, we're certainly going to know what we're up against," said Folk.

"Really, it could be to our advantage meeting him right off the bat. Because our first game is so big, we'll certainly be involved and ready. Our minds will be on nothing else."

At Sunday night's traditional opening social event, the Elmer Freytag Memorial Award for outstanding contribution to curling went to Bob Grierson of Scotland.

Garmisch-Partenkirchen, West Germany, was named as the site for the 1982 championship. The 1972 tournament was held in Garmisch-Partenkirchen and Orest Meleschuk of Winnipeg won the title that year — the last time Canada won.

The 1981 championship is scheduled for London, Ont.

Tigers I triumph

Tigers I came out on top Sunday in the battle of the "big 'uns" in Vancouver Island Men's Field Hockey Association action — but, boy, was it close!

The East Indian side squeezed out a 1-0 win over Rebels I at Windsor Park on Mulkeet Singh's goal to wind up the league season five points ahead of their arch rivals.

Rebels II moved into a third-place tie with Oak Bay by defeating Castaways 2-1.

Oak Bay, which tied 2-2 Sunday with Pirates, still has a last game against last-place Rebels III.

With Jaswinder Samra scoring three goals and Jaswant Samra and Hargit Nandhra getting one each, Tigers II crushed Rebels III, 5-0.

Castaways, forced to play a second game on the same day to help catch up the schedule, was blanked 8-0 by UVic. Bo Louis scored four times and the other UVic goals came from Julian Sekis, Chris Yue, Bruce Cook and Peter Roberts.

McIlraith saves day for Cosmos

Cosmopolitan Royals avoided relegation from the Vancouver Island Soccer League's first division with a 2-1 win over Oak Bay Sunday — and what a way for veteran Gil McIlraith to end his playing career!

With tallies by Mark Wyatt for the Royals and Mark McNally-Dawes for Oak Bay, McIlraith, who has been playing Island League soccer since 1964 and was appearing in his last game, scored what proved to be the winning goal, slamming in a cross by Brock Coupar at the 61-minute mark.

It was his only goal of the season.

Wyatt had opened the scoring on a rebound from a shot by Bobby Mackie 21 minutes into the game and McNally Dawes was last to score, connecting with the net at the 75-minute mark.

The win moved the Royals out of a tie with Oak Bay, past Gorge and beyond danger of relegation. Last-place Castaways and one other team — Powell River, Oak Bay or Gorge — will drop to the second-division next season.

Castaways shocked the league-leading Canadian champion Vic West squad by holding it to 2-2 as all the other games ended in ties.

Vic West took a 1-0 lead at the 20-minute mark on Bobby Duncan's tally in a goalmouth scramble but Steve Bowers evened things with a goal for Castaways at 37 minutes.

The Wests went ahead just before half time with a goal by Dan Henry on a fine pass from Duncan after 44 minutes but, although they dominated play in the second half, their opponents tied it up again at the 82-minute mark when Brian Heaps scored.

Second-place Victoria Athletics could have moved into a tie at the top with a win — but they, too, were held to a 2-2 game by Gorge.

George Pakos put Athletics ahead, heading in a corner kick after 28 minutes but Clayton Booth scored on a penalty for Gorge. Dave McCaig put Athletics in front again with a fine goal but, with two minutes left on the clock, Stu Holroyd scored on a rebound to create the tie.

Up-Island, Nanaimo could have pulled level with UVic and Mestons, who were both idle Sunday, but the Hub City squad was held to a 3-3 tie by Powell River.

League-leading scorer Don Attig fired in his 17th and 18th goals of the season and Mark Spees also scored to give Nanaimo a 3-0 half-time lead but Powell River bounced back strongly in the second half to score three straight goals and force the tie.

There were five makeup games in the second division and in division 3, Lakehill edged Cordova Bay, 2-1.

In a division 4 cup game, Duncan nipped Royals 4-3 and in the fifth division championship cup semi-finals, it was Saanich United 2-1 over Cordova Bay and Port Alberni 5-0 over Prairie Inn. Castaways downed Duncan 3-2 in the fifth-division consolation cup final.

'Y' volleyball squad visiting Japan

The Victoria YMCA women's volleyball club is currently playing a series of exhibition games in Japan.

The trip is the culmination of two years of preparation following an ivitation from the Iwate Volleyball Association which visited Victoria in 1978.

The "Y" team, Canadian juvenile champions, will be playing matches against all-star clubs, one of the top four university teams and the ninth-ranked company team plus informal matches in various centres.

Six of the "Y" players — Cathy Bryan, Darlene Leung, Kelly Speak, Janice Paxton, Sharon Dhillon and Kelly Meechan — have represented B.C. on provincial teams at various times in the Canada Games, Pacific Rim or Can-Am competitions. Eveline Greene has been named to the Can-Am team for the next competition in May.

On its return the team will enter the B.C. championships, April 12 and 19, leading to the Canadian junior and juvenile championships respectively.

Islanders top Leafs in final

PORT ALBERNI — Port Alberni Islanders have won their way into the semi-final round of the B.C. Coy Cup intermediate "A" hockey championships the hard way.

The Islanders Sunday defeated the South Island Big Six champions, Esquimalt Maple Leafs, 6-5 in overtime, to capture the best-of-three Island championship series, two games to one, and all in extra time.

Port Alberni won the opener 3-2 in overtime, Friday, and the Maple Leafs squared matters Saturday with a 6-5 decision in the second overtime period.

Loren Smith, with his third goal of the game, got the winner for Port Alberni at 5:35 of the first overtime period Sunday.

George Shiner, Howard Hewitt and Bruce Ward scored the other goals for the winners.

Bobby Martin with two, Robbie Coldwell, Chris Riddell and Terry Parsons scored for the Leafs, who came from behind a 5-3 deficit to tie the score in the third period on goals by Martin and Parsons.

At Prince Rupert, John Beaudry fired three goals to pace Prince Rupert Kings to an 11-7 victory over Fort St. John Flyers Sunday in the deciding game of their quarter-final series.

Gord Girard and Sandy Bain scored two goals each to lead Burnaby Lakers to an 8-4 win over the Vernon Cougars and a berth in the semi-finals.

UCLA, Louisville in NCAA hoop final

Times News Services

INDIANAPOLIS — Kiki Vandeweghe scored 24 points and the aggressive UCLA defence limited all-America centre Joe Barry Carroll to 17 points Saturday as the Bruins beat Purdue 67-62 to advance to the NCAA basketball finals against Louisville tonight.

The Louisville Cardinals, getting 34 points from guard Darrell Griffith, moved into the championship game with an 80-72 victory over Iowa before a screaming, sellout crowd of 16,637 at Market Square Arena.

Vandeweghe, a senior, clinched the UCLA victory by making four free throws in the final 41 seconds after Purdue had closed a 10-point deficit and pulled within one.

It's the first trip to the finals in five years for UCLA, which won 10 national titles in a 12-year span under coach John Wooden, but which early this season only had an 8-6 record and was fortunate to be invited.

The high-flying Griffith was practically the whole show for Louisville (32-3), the nation's second-ranked team. The 6-foot-4 guard, with a vertical jump of four feet, scored 18 of Louisville's first 22 points as the Cardinals built a 34-29 lead at intermission.

Griffith's performance was four points shy of the national semi-final record of 38 set by West Virginia's Jerry West against Louisville in 1959.

(The game will be televised on channel 5 starting at 6 p.m.)

The Creation: thrilling

By AUDREY JOHNSON

A week-long celebration of the music of Mozart and his contemporaries had an auspicious introduction Sunday with the presentation of Haydn's The Creation at the University Centre auditorium.

The Creation is a supreme work of genius in the oratorio form. It harmonizes with the spring season in a special way and the spirit of celebration is wonderfully present in the great choruses such as The Heavens are Telling, and Achieved is the Glorious Work.

The performance by the University Chorus and Little Orchestra of the University of Victoria with three soloists, an ensemble conducted by George Corwin, is musically thorough and has an air of dedication and enthusiasm that provides some thrilling moments.

There is a repeat performance tonight and no one who cares about music of this kind should miss the opportunity to hear The Creation under such highly favorable circumstances.

The chorus of more than 150 voices, comprising students, faculty andcommunity singers, provides a fine blend and texture of sound. Attack and release is quite outstanding in its consistent precision, and dynamics are well controlled and balanced between chorus and orchestra.

Thus Corwin achieves a richness of color with a fine sense of swell in climactic phrases and some moments, such as Awake the Harp, that have the luminosity of light shining through mist.

The orchestra, with Paul Kling as leader, consisting of senior students and faculty, provides substantial support. It has vitality, is responsive and in such exposed moments as the prelude and intermittently throughout, is revealed as a talented and disciplined ensemble.

Vancouver soprano Iris Fraser sings the roles of Gabriel and Eve, and what a lovely, affecting voice this is. Production is ribbon-smooth and so splendidly supported by the breath that it soars effortlessly through the complexities of the score.

The sound has a fine glowing texture, but at the same time there is depth and substance in its resonance. All is used with exceptional artistry and a musical expertness that makes it a joy to hear her With Verdure Clad, her On Mighty Pens, and her duets with Adam (Bernard Turgeon) in Part Three, especially the lyrical Dearest Spouse.

Turgeon's rich baritone, his command of a great range of vocal color, superb handling of phrase and dramatic effect, are well used throughout the dual roles of Raphael and Adam. They render memorable among the many good things, Now Heav'n in Fullest Glory Shone and Rolling in Foaming Billows.

Tenor David Astor is technically adroit and clearly greatly experienced in oratorio work. But while the upper areas of his voice float amid a pleasing resonance, the lower register has a dull timbre and lacks effective color.

Of his several appearances, all efficiently handled, the most pleasing is his recitative introduction to Part Three, In Rosy Mantle.

The Mozart/Contemporaries celebration initiated by the UVic School of Music, continues throughout the week with with recitals, lectures and workshops, highlighted by guest appearances by Viennese pianist Paul Badura-Skoda.

Film flops featured at festival

NEW YORK (Reuter) — When Attack of the Killer Tomatoes opened two years ago, critics gave it a raw deal.

They said this film in which giant tomatoes go mad and attempt to destroy San Diego, while a pop group sings "I'm going to miss her, a tomato ate my sister," was lousy.

It was worst than that and now it will finally get its just desserts.

Attack of the Giant Tomatoes will have pride of place as the worst vegetable movie of all time at the The Worst Film Festival which opens in New York next month.

The five-day long festival starting April 15 has enough cinematic clinkers to make the late Sonny Tufts, one of the world's worst actors, feel right at home.

Among the other 25 films to be shown are The Terror of Tiny Town, the world's first and only all midget musical western and such other all time losers as They Saved Hitler's Brain and Plan Nine From Outer Space, considered the worst film of all time.

Plan Nine was directed by the late Edward Wood, a hard-drinking transvestite with a heart of gold.

Wood, who dressed in pantsuits, pantyhose and medium-heel women's shoes, also made such masterpieces of awfulness as I Changed My Sex (also called Glen or Glenda) and Bride of the Monster.

His films are considered so bad that a book being promoted in connection with the festival, called The Golden Turkey Awards, written by bad movie experts Harry and Michael Medved, hails him as the worst director of all time.

Plan Nine is about grave robbers from outer space and includes a scene in which a paper plate is used as a burning flying saucer.

Like other Wood films, it was filmed in a friend's backyard with the worst actors (usually friends of Woods's) available and had weird dialogue that made no sense.

Wood was a friend of the late Bela Lugosi, who in Bride of the Monster can be heard defending his 400-pound assistant Lobo as being as "harmless as a kitchen."

Lugosi, then suffering from severe drug addiction, had meant to say as "harmless as a kitten" but in a Wood film such niceties were ignored as the game director pressed on despite all obstacles, earning himself a place in history.

Many of the bad films to be shown at the festival have monster or terror themes and leave the audience limp with laughter at somber scenes that ought to terrify at least.

For example there is Robot Monster which sports the most ridiculous monster ever to appear on screen — a man in a gorilla costume wearing a deep-sea diver's helmet.

The director of this epic was so broke that he could not afford to rent anything remotely convincing so he borrowed a gorilla suit from a friend and showed it on the screen without even bothering to cover up its gaping rips.

Then there is The Incredibly Strange Creatures Who Stopped Living and Became Crazy Mixed-Up Zombies.

"As the title would indicate, this is a terrible film but it had as its cinematographers Vilmos Zsigmond and Lazlo Kovas who later went on to make excellent films," said festival organizer Lauren Drewery, an Ottawa publicist.

The festival has been arranged by Miss Drewery and three other Canadians who last year staged a simliar festival in Ottawa in which the Medved brothers provided discussion of the films afterward.

Record opera grant

TORONTO (CP) — American Express Canada Inc. has announced a $60,000 grant to the Canadian Opera Company for the production of Norma in April-May, 1981.

Michael Strauss, vice-president and general manager of American Express Canada, said the grant for the Bellini opera, which will feature soprano Joan Sutherland in the role of Norma, is the largest ever made by the company to a North American performing arts organization.

Rod Anderson, a past president of the opera company, said the $60,000 also is the largest single gift ever received by the company from a corporate sponsor.

Urgent call for help from Afghan rebels

United Press International

Afghan rebels have appealed for help in their struggle against Soviet occupation troops, warning that massive Russian reinforcements threatened the very existence of the resistance forces.

The appeal Sunday by the Hizbe Islami group, backed by other rebel sources, estimated the number of Soviet troops in Afghanistan had increased by 20,000 to more than 100,000. It was the first indication by insurgents that they are having problems.

It contrasted with the steady reports of heavy Soviet and Afghan losses since Soviet forces invaded Afghanistan Dec. 27.

Rebel sources said the increase in Soviet troops equipped with the most modern weapons means all resistance to the Soviet-backed Afghan government in Kabul will vanish in no time if significant assistance is not rushed to the rebels.

The rebel sources reported at least 30,000 Soviet troops in Afghanistan's eastern provinces bordering Pakistan and about 500 tanks in Kunar province, an equal number in Nangarhar province and 100 tanks in Paktia province.

Afghan rebel organizations in Pakistan said they believe Soviet and Afghan troops have succeeded in cutting rebel communications and may be trying to seal off the Pakistan frontier.

In Pakistan, President Mohammed Zia ul-Haq predicted the Afghan rebels would ultimately triumph over the Soviets and the Moscow-backed government.

Zia, speaking to the Joint Services Pakistan Day parade, said. "We cannot remain unmindful or unconcerned" about Pakistan's northwest borders which face Afghanistan, and reminded the armed forces of their responsibility to defend the nation.

As for the Afghans, Zia said, "I am sure that they would continue to protect their national honor and the independence of their country even now."

Zia said outnumbered Moslems had defeated big and powerful enemies a number of times throughout history.

Swedes vote for N-plants, with curbs

STOCKHOLM (Reuter) — Swedes have voted for a limited expansion of their nuclear energy program, referendum results announced today show.

About 58 per cent voted Sunday for starting no more than six new reactors, a result that could mean nuclear energy would end in Sweden after the 25- to 30-year lifespan of the new reactors.

About 39 per cent voted to take Sweden's six working reactors out of operation by 1990.

Sweden's anti-nuclear Prime Minister Thorbjoern Faelldin told a news conference after Sunday's vote in a nuclear-energy referendum that he would abide by the will of the people.

Queen Mum salute planned

QUEEN MOTHER

LONDON (Reuter) — Military units from Canada, Australia and New Zealand will offer an 80th birthday salute to the Queen Mother as part of centenary year celebrations of the royal tournament, according to tournament officials.

The annual showpiece of British military pageantry is scheduled from July 9 to July 26 at London's Earls Court, and tournament officials anticipate capacity crowds in a year marking two anniversaries — the tournament's 100th birthday and the Queen Mother's 80th birthday.

An army band from Kenya led by Lt.-Col. S. K. Kipsaita of Nairobi will also take part in a show which has become one of the rituals of the London summer season, alongside such attractions as the changing of the guard and the Henley Royal Regatta.

The tournament takes in naval field gun displays, a musical drive by the King's troop, a musical quadrille by the Household Cavalry in their breastplates and plumes and other displays which a tournament booklet said would not be found anywhere else in the world.

The 22 regiments taking part include the Black Watch of Canada's Royal Highland Regiment, the Toronto Scottish, the Canadian Forces medical services and medical corps from Australia and New Zealand.

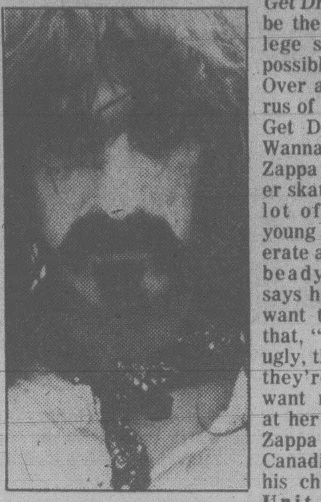
Prince Andrew can testify that even a prince's life can be rough. He has just survived a nine-day marine commando training course at the Lympstone Training Centre in southwest England. As a result, the prince has earned the coveted green beret, an honor he can proudly display when he returns to naval college. Prince Andrew, 20, successfuly completed a "Tarzan" assault course, a 48-kilometre march and a 20-kilometre hike weighed down in full gear. "He's much fitter than he was," said Warrant Officer Gordon Offer-Hoar, the prince's commanding officer. "You only have to look at his face to tell the difference."



Frank Zappa

Frank Zappa's current single, I Don't Wanna Get Drafted, soon may be the anthem of college students facing possible conscription. Over a repetitive chorus of "I Don't Wanna Get Drafted, I Don't Wanna Get Drafted," Zappa protests, "Roller skates 'n' disco is a lot of fun, I'm too young and stupid to operate a gun." Then the beady-eyed Zappa says his sister doesn't want to go, either — that, "Wars are really ugly, they're dirty and they're cold, I don't want nobody shootin' at her foxhole." Zany Zappa has planned a Canadian holiday for his children — Moon Unit, Ahmet and Dweezel.

"America's Sweetheart" died last year, at 86, and now the 22-room Beverly Hills, Calif., mansion in which she spent her final years is on the block. Buddy Rogers — husband of the late Mary Pickford — says he's asking $10 million for Pickfair estate, built in Hollywood's heyday by Miss Pickford and then-husband Douglas Fairbanks Sr. Proceeds of the sale will go to the Mary Pickford Foundation. Rogers will build a smaller house for himself — at $700,000 — on a section of the property. Says he, "I'm calling it the Pickfair Lodge. I will be able to put in my furniture, my pianos. It will be just like home."

The City Council has decided to let Nazi dictator Adolf Hitler remain an honorary citizen of Bad Nauheim. Council members defeated a motion to remove Hitler's name from the honorary citizens list. The motion resulted from a controversy last year in which Hitler's name appeared in a book published to celebrate the town's 125th anniversary. Hitler was awarded honorary citizenship in 1933, the beginning of his National Socialist administration in Germany.

Dear Abby: Wondering asked what marriage would be like with a woman who kept reminding him to keep his elbows off the table, chew his food thoroughly, etc. You said, "Like being nine years old again and married to your mother."

You were right. Nothing spoils a fine meal or any pleasurable setting as much as incessant nagging about etiquette.

I hope the unfortunate man decided to lean across the table, with his elbows firmly planted on it, and kiss the young woman goodbye. And I hope that before he did it, he rattled the spoon while stirring his coffee, slurped it loudly, wiped his mouth with his sleeve and belched!

Another of this perplexed man's complaints involved his beloved's refusal to let him talk with food in his mouth.

A romantic little tableau comes to mind in which the guy's girlfriend gently places her knife and fork on the plate, chews thoroughly, swallows completely, dabs at the corners of her mouth with a napkin and says, "Dearest, your pants are on fire."

And she'd probably object if he used his glass of water to put himself out.

Patrick Mott

Dear Patrick: Beautiful! I am informed that you write a consistantly bright column for the Register in Santa Anna, Calif., in which my column also appears. Congratulations, Patrick, you've just won another reader!

Dear Abby: We have a 17-year-old son who sucks his thumb. He seems so mature in all other ways that we can't understand it.

Is this a sign of insecurity or perhaps a mental problem?

Perplexed

Dear Perplexed: Thumb sucking is a habit formed in infancy which provides the thumb sucker with a feeling of pleasure and gratification. It is harmless. The possibility of embarrassment and humiliation may motivate the thumb sucker to overcome the habit, but psychiatrists say, "Leave him alone."

Dear Abby: My Dad, a widower who lives in another city, has a December-May romance going. He has informed us that he and his girlfriend will be coming to stay with us for a weekend soon. We have only one guest room, but can accommodate two guests in separate rooms if necessary by using our sofa-bed, too.

We know for a fact that they have taken trips together and registered as Mr. and Mrs. although Dad doesn't know that we know this.

Our problem: Should we just assume that Dad and his girlfriend want to share one room? Or should we just set them up in separate rooms?

Daughter

Dear Daughter: Prepare the guest room for two. Also have the sofa-bed in readiness. When Dad and his friend arrive, ask Dad (privately) which set-up he prefers, and act accordingly.

The life and death of Ginger Goodwin

If you carry a union card, you will be aware that organized labor in British Columbia did not come to its present status without a generous expenditure of blood, sweat and tears. Labor fought its battles, with victory and bitter loss, in many a provincial town.

In Ladysmith . . . in Nanaimo . . . in Cumberland, old men who remember the coal-mining days still become gruff and grim when they recall The Great 1912 Strike and the troubled years thereafter.

Those were years that gave martyrs to the cause of Labor. One of these was Albert "Ginger" Goodwin of Cumberland. Even though 62 years have passed since the entire population of that middle-Island town marched to the graveyard behind Ginger Goodwin's coffin, voices still soften when Ginger's name is spoken.

On the record, Ginger was hunted down and shot as a First World War draft evader. But in Cumberland, where the miners' slant-roofed little houses still stand to remind men of the past, they tell a different story. Ginger was gunned down, they insist, in retaliation for his union activities.

He was a frail wisp of a man, this Ginger Goodwin, with a mouthful of bad teeth that gave him hell. But he had a fire in his belly and eloquence on his tongue, and as a young man in Cumberland, he enjoyed local fame as a better than average good football player. (Soccer was the game: the tough miners called it football in Welsh or Scottish or English accents, and loved it.)

Ginger became a socialist labor leader when still little more than a boy. He played a man's part in the 1912 Vancouver Island Coal Strike, then moved on to Trail where he became Trades and Labor Council president and secretary of the Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers' Union.

In 1917, Ginger sparkplugged the Council into calling a strike on the issue of the eight-hour day. The strike ended late that year, and early in 1918, Ginger was called up for military service.

Since he had earlier been declared exempt because of his physical condition, the new call-up came as a surprise and a shock. Ginger construed it to be revenge for his part in the strike. He protested on the grounds that there should be no conscription of manpower without conscription of wealth. Also, he asked for exemption by reason of his own ill-health. His appeals were refused.

Perhaps a wiser man would have gone along. After all, the war was close to its end: it would have meant only a few months of military service. However that may be, Ginger Goodwin returned to Cumberland, loaded a pack, and took to the hills.

He was a fine woodsman. For months thereafter, he evaded determined attempts by men of a special federal police corps to track him down.

Until recent years, the cabin which was Ginger's hideout squatted hidden in the vastnesses of the upper Oyster River country, its shake walls covered with sheets from World War I newspapers. For all I know, it may still be mouldering back into the wilderness up there.)

To the federal government, Ginger might be a draft evader. But to Cumberland he was a hero, to be helped out with food and supplies at need, and slipped a warning whenever a new posse set out to bring him in.

But the end was inevitable. A day came when Ginger's luck ran out. A constable of the special federal draft-evasion force, one of a five-man squad, came on Goodwin in the dense brush where he was hiding. The constable's story was that Ginger levelled a rifle at him, and that he fired in self-defence.

This does not consort well with old miners' insistence that Ginger Goodwin, as a convinced pacifist, would have no truck with firearms. But be that as it may, the constable's bullet, a soft-nose slug, pierced Ginger's wrist, then expanded in his neck, blasting his spinal cord.

"They let him lay there," a Cumberland man once told me, so moved that tears stood in his eyes. "They shot poor Ginger down, then they just left him to lay there like a bloody dog!"

The constable who did the shooting was arrested (which, Cumberland's temper being as it was may have been just as well!) and charged with manslaughter. In protest at Ginger's death, labor called a one-day general strike in Vancouver. The constable's case dragged on through one court after another until in the Fall Assizes of 1918, he was acquitted.

And what of Ginger, or rather of his pathetic remains?

The miners of Cumberland went out and brought him home. They carried his coffin down the main street of the mining town, followed by a throng that filled the street from side to side, and they laid him away in a place of honor in Cumberland Cemetery.

There, a reminder of unhappy far-off times, his weathered stone still stands wih this inscription:

Lest we forget.

Take heart fellow frumps -- nobody looks this good at home

In praise of glorious frumpishness

By ENID NEMY
New York Times

It's enough to give anyone a complex. There you are, sitting at home, with your bare face hanging out, wrapped in a much-washed terry robe, padding around in frayed scuffs, and you just know that everyone else is at home wearing all those wonderful creations that dot the pages of the fashion magazines.

If you live alone, you get the feeling that you really should shape up, whether or not there is anyone else around. Everything you've ever read tells you that it would be good for the morale, that you'd feel a lot better, if you put on some lipstick, and a great-looking caftan and some pretty mules. Maybe you would. Maybe you will. Tomorrow.

If there's a man around the house, you occasionally, but not too often, wonder what he's thinking as he looks at you. Is he dreaming of glamorous women in velvet hostess gowns, satin robes and silk lounging pajamas or slinky creatures in beautifully creased pants, silk shirts and chains; those soignee characters sketched by imaginative artists for imaginative ads? Does he think he's the only man whose daytime swan turns into an at-home duckling, whose peach becomes a lemon?

Very likely he does, but take heart. According to an unscientific survey, with a more than 4 per cent chance of error, an amazing number of the chic, attractive women one sees in public aren't quite so chic or attractive in private. There are far fewer visions of loveliness floating around behind closed doors than fashion magazines, imagination and our own guilt complexes would have us believe.

"There are only three kinds of women who look gorgeous at home," said one woman who is, admittedly, often wrong. "The first is the woman who is trying to catch a man, or is married or living with a guy with a real roving eye. The second is a woman with servants. And the third doesn't even bear thinking about. She has high cheekbones, a flat stomach and thinks anyone over 25 is middle-aged."

The woman who is often wrong is herself one of that sleek and smart group, with smooth shining hair, meticulously outlined, glossed lips, clothes put together with flair and style, that one sees every two seconds up Fifth, down Park, along Madison. It is almost impossible to visualize her looking less than perfect.

"This is only one-half the real me," she said. "I enjoy getting dressed to go to the office, or out in the evening, but still it's the me that's on. When I get home, I want to turn off."

Cristina De Lorean, a model whose face has adorned Harpers Bazaar and Cosmopolitan magazine covers, and who can now be seen in Virginia Slims and Monet jewelry ads, has somewhat the same attitude. When she's at home, she wants to be comfortable.

Mrs. De Lorean starts her routine by taking off her makeup. She then pulls back her hair and puts on a warm robe and bobby socks.

"It's a decent enough robe," she said. "Sometimes my husband laughs and says, 'Your closet is full of clothes, is that all you have to wear?' But when I ask him if I should change, he says, 'No.'"

If Eve Orton still has a modicum of energy when she gets home, she'll put on jeans and a sweater. Most of the time, the energy isn't there. That means she reaches for her 'schlepp' robe.

"It's a camel-colored terry cloth and I was absolutely thrilled when I found it," she said. "It's everything I want, and it's not as gucky as pink."

Another aficionado of terry cloth is Elizabeth Harrison, who was once married to Richard Harris, and who was then married to Rex Harrison, and who now lives in New York a good deal of the time. Mrs. Harrison was brought up in England when coupons were still required for clothing purchases.

"We always took off our good clothes when we got home, so they would keep longer," she said. "We'd wear anything around, and that stayed with me. I find it relaxing to wear a bathrobe, and I always run around in bare feet at home."

Abortion issue remains complex one

By DR. BOB YOUNG

When I went to medical school, only a generation ago, about the most dastardly thing a doctor could do was perform an abortion. They were illegal, against medical ethics, and any doctor doing them was an outcast as far as the medical community was concerned.

But they were done. Virtually every large city had a physician or two who would do timely operations in his office to help women who found themselves unacceptably pregnant.

The authorities generally knew what was going on, but prosecutions were few. The feeling seemed to be that it was better and safer for a girl to be aborted by someone who knew what they were doing (as these doctors did), than to have it done by an unskilled amateur.

The other doctors in the town also were, as a rule, conversant with the facts. Although they would not consider doing an abortion themselves, many thought they were doing their patients a service if they provided the name in cases where they felt an abortion was a suitable solution to the problem.

The women who were unable to find, or afford, someone who would abort them still had a couple of options. It should be mentioned first that many women did not consider an abortion to be an alternative — if you were pregnant you had the baby.

Many women and girls would marry the father of the child. Frequently this was a satisfactory solution and a succesful and happy marriage ensued. Many "shotgun" marriages, however, were disastrous and led to a life of misery for both partners and a poor home for the child.

The other option was to go to another town and have the baby. There were (and are) centres for unwed mothers, housing and care was provided, delivery was performed, often by medical students and interns, and the child was placed for adoption. The young mothers were able to leave these hospitals with their heads held high.

The abortion question is weighted by religious, legal, social and medical factors. A solution that will be comfortable for all is probably impossible. Perhaps the time has come to recognize this.

Info/Health is brought to you by the British Columbia Medical Association and the Times. Dr. Young welcomes letters. Personal replies, however, are not possible and only topics of broadest general interest will be referred to. Write c/o Victoria Times, 2621 Douglas St., Victoria, V8W 2N4.

New art gallery opens this week

It must take courage, I suggested, to give up a steady monthly paycheque for a venture that, while promising, has yet to prove a success.

Especially if you are a single parent, with two teenagers still in school.

Not so, said Patricia (Trish) Alexander.

Rather it takes a firm belief in the venture, coupled with knowing it is something you've wanted to do for a long time.

Trish left her position as a provincial government secretary at the end of February to become co-owner with Milton Tisdale in an art gallery soon to be opened at the Douglas Street level of the newly-renovated Crystal Garden.

The need for a gallery at a good downtown location and "just a step off the street" has been in her mind for a couple of years. She even went looking, a while back, for a suitable place without, as she confesses, much success.

Recently Tisdale, a lucky applicant for Crystal Garden space, put out the word that he would need a manager.

Someone gave him Mrs. Alexander's name, and their meeting ended in a decision to go into partnership.

The gallery will open next weekend with selections from works of artists in this area, Vancouver, the lower mainland and from as far away as Kelowna and Calgary.

"Eventually we hope to include artists from many other places in Canada," Trish Alexander told me.

"We'd also like to present some who have not as yet had work before the public and who are ready for it."

Displays will include oils, acrylics, watercolors, pastels and prints, both originals and reproductions.

While the two partners plan to work together on acceptance or rejection of various works and the selection of what they will show, Trish, as originally intended, will act as manager of the gallery itself while Tisdale takes on many outside responsibilities.

Actually Mrs. Alexander is a late comer to an understanding of art in any form.

As a girl growing up and attending school in Winnipeg it was outdoor sports that held her interest; and at university her high marks came in home economics.

It was after marriage and a move with her husband to Toronto in the late '60s, that "for something to do I joined the women's committee of the Toronto Art Gallery."

In turn this led to being placed in charge of an art program for young children.

The family moved to this city in 1970 and Trish immediately became a member of the women's committee of the Greater Victoria Art Gallery.

Work there included running the picture loan project for a time, directing one of the annual Artists At Work programs, helping to organize the gallery shop and acting as its first manager.

Husband and wife eventually decided to separate. Trish went back to school, upgraded her typing and shorthand skills and, to help support herself and the children, found work as secretary in the office of the provincial government co-ordinator of art.

It was through that office, while the NDP formed the government, a program was activated to acquire works of British Columbia artists for various government buildings and to commission some of those artists to add elegance to other buildings under construction or being renovated.

She rose to the position of assistant co-ordinator there and when the person who held the spot resigned, became acting co-ordinator.

It was a short lived rise to power however, for after the Social Credit government took over, the office of co-ordinator of art became more or less dormant and much of the handling, placing and caring for more than 600 works that had been acquired was taken over by a different ministry.

Mrs. Alexander's position was phased out and she moved on as secretary in another department.

Despite the move, her interest in art continued and increased and was again recognized, two years ago, with appointment to the Community Arts Council of Victoria board.

One of its main functions is to produce a calendar every two months with up-to-date information on all arts events.

Another is the responsibility of organizing exhibitions and noontime concerts in the McPherson Playhouse.

Still another is the careful apportioning of grants authorized by the government for organizations and individuals interested in the arts.

Trish is also a board member of the Greater Victoria Art Gallery and works there with the community relations committee.

Postscript: Formal opening (by invitation only) of the Crystal Garden Gallery, as it has been named, will take place next Friday evening.

Doors will open to the public on Saturday morning. Regular Crystal Garden hours, from 10 a.m. to 5:30 p.m., daily, will be maintained.

"The gallery is not very large," Trish Alexander says, "but we do have a mezzanine and that gives us a certain amount of extra space for displays.

"So come in and meet us. I'll be there to welcome you and to help in any way I can."

Age-65 experts lean to freedom

By LES HOLBROOK

"Research may even indicate that the conferral of retirement at age 65 occurs at the least desirable time; as youth may be wasted on the young, so may retirement be wasted on the elderly," says Dr. D. Laurence Wilson, president of the Canadian Medical Association.

My own research and mail confirms that quite a few older Canadians consider their senior years wasted if they cannot continue to be engaged in productive, satisfying, gainful work. But such seniors are in the minority; the majority of workers, particularly those who have worked at dull, dead-end jobs, are more than ready to call it quits.

As the Senate Committee on Retirement Age Policies got into its examination of "all aspects of public and private policies governing retirement ages" it quickly became clear that the issues involved in mandatory (forced) retirement are far from simple.

The Senate committee noted in its report ("Retirement Without Tears" — December, 1979) that "there are arguments for and against mandatory retirement that need to be assessed and some of these raise complex issues of social and economic policy."

Recognizing the problems involved, the committee recommended a step-by-step approach to revised retirement policies for those who wish to or need to continue work past age 65.

A major recommendation: "That the age of mandatory retirement be extended one year at a time for five years by modification of legislation and rules dealing with human rights and pension plans and that flexible retirement policies including the eventual abolition of mandatory retirement be adopted as a goal."

Committee consensus was that elimination of mandatory retirement would not increase significantly the labor force participation of the older population — at least into the foreseeable future.

A later report (February 26, 1980) by the Conference Board of Canada supports this opinion. If permitted to do so, a surprisingly small number of employees would continue to work after age 65, it claims.

The board believes that the number choosing to continue working would be so small that it would have only a minor influence on ensuring that the elderly have adequate retirement income or on future pressures on the pension system.

The board's study indicates that of each 100 employees now age 55 and working for an employer with a pension plan, about 70 per cent will have left the firm by age 65.

About 50 per cent will retire before that age, either through early retirement provisions or for health reasons. Fifteen per cent will die before 65 and six per cent will be laid off and not find another job.

Of the remaining 29 per cent, 25 per cent likely will retire at 65 leaving only four per cent to work beyond the traditional retirement date.

And even if the whole 29 per cent decided to continue working, it would account only for under 0.2 per cent of the labor force.

So why not some early action to begin amendments to rules and regulations permitting personal-choice retirement — so long as we are competent to do the job?

Quilt-making's a hobby with infinite variety

The wonderful thing about quilt-making is its infinite variety. We all like different things and quilting has something to satisfy everyone's taste. Some of us like the intricate geometry of patchwork — figuring out the myriad ways to arrange complex designs.

Others enjoy hand stitching, which provides hours of relaxing leisure time. Still others appreciate the chance it provides to turn their skills into money-making craft projects be it for their own or mutual benefit.

For a great many with not too, too much time available, but the real desire to give a gift made by hand, the simple applique is the answer. In response to many requests, here is a Quickie Doggy Applique for quilts, purses, wall hangings and pictures — even a stuffed toy.

Doggy's ears are calico, as is his coat. His body may be made in a complementary or contrasting color. His face, paws and tail may each be cut in one large piece with the details of the paws done in quilting stitches (in a color that stands out) and the details of the face done with felt or embroidery stitches.

Sharon Dunnigan, who drafted the pattern for us, suggests using red velveteen for his tongue 'for a soft look'. Doggy is about 18" (46 cm) high and 22" (56 cm) wide, and is just the right size for the top of a crib quilt. Fill in the borders with the same calico fabric, finishing with a solid — why not add a quilting stitch design in the shape of a bone.

Lots of different fabric choices are possible for this applique and you can use any color. Try corduroy, fun, fun, velveteens or velours. Broadcloth or gingham and calico are always good. This would be a good pattern for machine applique. Putting bits of 'Stitch-Witchery' behind the pieces will hold them in place while you stitch, and adding stuffing underneath the applique will give him a puffy, real-life appearance. Simple directions are included with the pattern.

To make the stuffed toy, simply assemble your applique pieces onto background fabric. Put a lining fabric on top, right sides together. Stitch all around using the outside edge as a guide, leaving an opening for turning. Turn and stuff. It's now ready to give to a small child to squeeze and love.

Patterns Available: No. KF-1113: Doggy Applique Pattern suitable for child's quilt, wall hanging, etc. $4.20.

PAK NO. 72: 35 Quilting Stitch Designs for central motifs, quilt borders and embellishments on clothing and other articles. Hundreds of uses. $3.00.

How to Order: Send your name, address and postal code, along with a cheque or money order to: Hearthside Patterns, c/o Victoria Times, P.O. Box 9120, Station E, Edmonton, Alta. T5P 4K2.

Dentists' politics rapped

VANCOUVER (CP) — The province's senior trial judge has suggested the B.C. dental profession should separate the art of dentistry from internal politics in disciplinary matters.

Chief Justice Allan McEachern of the B.C. Supreme Court made the suggestion at a hearing in which he reserved judgment on a dentist's bid to stop an inquiry into his professional conduct.

The judge's comment was prompted by suggestions that the College of Dental Surgeons seemed partly motivated by internal politics in its decision to charge its elected treasurer, Murray Bloom, with various offences.

McEachern noted that Bloom is charged not only with practising substandard dentistry, but also with offences which are concerned with internal wrangling among college officers.

After a three-day hearing into Bloom's attempt to halt the court of inquiry, the judge remarked that the interim dispute might be solved if the college confined itself to investigating Bloom's dentistry skills.

The charges against Bloom, who has criticized the profession's establishment, were laid in December after he told the media about alleged irregularities in the affairs of the college.

Sooke rafters getting ready

The sixth annual Sooke River Raft Race will be held April 12 and 13.

Organizers say the river is running high and they hope it will continue that way until race day, making for a faster event.

The race, sponsored each spring by the Sooke Firemen's Association, will have events for men, women, fathers, sons and youths.

Raft design must follow guidelines laid down by the firemen. Each raft must be at least four feet by eight feet, be homemade and not resemble the lines of a boat. It can't have fixed oarlocks, motors or rudders but paddles and poles are permitted.

Each entrant must wear a life jacket and there must be at least two people on each raft.

Minimum age for entrants is 14 unless accompanied by an adult. Anyone under 10 must have written permission from a parent or guardian.

Prizes will be awarded for the most novel and best decorated rafts as well as the race winners.

Racers should check in by 10 a.m. Saturday with races expected to begin at about noon at the Sooke River Pot Holes Park on Sooke River Road.

The entry fee is $12 and the deadline for entry, release and consent forms is March 30. For further information contact the Raft Committee, Sooke Fire Department, Box 87, Sooke.

Canadians in China learn lesson in research neglect

By AB KENT

Canadian scientists who visited China last fall learned a graphic lesson about government neglect of research during the cultural revolution, a Victoria research director said Thursday.

Dr. Cedric Mann, director-general of the Institute of Ocean Sciences, told University of Victoria students and professors that he and his fellow scientists were invited to China as part of its effort to catch up on oceanographic research after a decade of official neglect.

"There is quite a lesson to be learned if only our politicians would go to see what happens to science if it is allowed to lapse for 10 years," Mann said.

The Canadians were shown Chinese research facilities along the East China Sea and Yellow Sea which were virtually abandoned when many of China's best and most promising scientists were banished during the period from 1966 to 1976.

Intellectual activities came to a halt and some of the academic staff and scientists were sent to do farm labor.

Mann said the anti-research atmosphere brought some unfortunate and far-reaching implications.

"They lost a whole generation of scientists. The 40-year-old men of experience in their fields disappeared," he said.

Although there is now a resurgence of research, Mann said, there is a noticeable lack of young people with experience who are capable of teaching and managing research projects.

Many of the older men with research experience are now in their 70s or 80s and are still teaching.

Although the Chinese institutions are well-equipped, their work is not well-directed.

Mann said the Chinese are quite aware of the problem and had long discussions with their visitors on how to solve it.

He said the Chinese begged the Canadians to lecture during the visit.

The Canadian scientists complied where possible, but without any certainty that they were getting across to their counterparts who lacked the background of a decade of Western ocanographic progress.

Mann said the projects being studied by China's 300-500 oceanographers are similar to Canadian subjects.

Included are coastal pollution, tides, currents, storm surges, temperature and salinity patterns.

Mann gave the Chinese credit for coming a long way in a short time, although the state of research remains a curious blend of primitive and sophisticated techniques.

But he predicted China will soon have large numbers of well-trained scientists surplus to the country's immediate needs in coastal and offshore oceanographic programs.

These people, he said, will probably go into more globally-oriented oceanography projects like those in the Antarctic where a number of other nations are already engaged in basic research on krill.

Mann said the Chinese will also soon have no need of North American instrumentation and electronics.

Afton miners reject appeal

KAMLOOPS (CP) — Striking workers at Afton Mines rejected a union executive's request to return to work Saturday.

About 270 members of the United Steel Workers of American local 8637 walked off the job Thursday, closing the copper mine, mill and smelter, near Kamloops to protest against a worker's suspension and high leveels of mercury pollution.

Soaring interest rate just a political ploy: UVic prof

By DON LINDENBERG

One of these days you may read that the interest rate of a leading New York bank has been bumped to 20 per cent.

You may also read that this is an effort to curb credit, that we have been living beyond our means by spending more than we really have and that by tightening our belts we are going to lick inflation.

If there is any logic in all of that, Dr. Leonard Laudadio, head of the University of Victoria's economics department, doesn't see it.

In an interview, the descriptions that kept coming up were absurd, stupid and a big mistake.

Laudadio says the real reason interest rates are rising is not to fight inflation at all, but to defend the value of the dollar, Canadian and American.

And defending the value of one's currency is somewhat akin to defending one's manhood, says Laudadio.

"It's a ritual thing that is politically popular."

All of this talk emanating primarily from the U.S. about curbing inflation with interest rates is nonsense, he adds.

But we're hearing it, probably because it is far more pious to say we are raising interest rates to fight inflation than to say we are raising them to defend the value of the dollar.

The current high interest rates can be traced to the policies of U.S. federal reserve system.

As the American Federal Reserve pushes its interest rates up, the 13,000 American banks which must occasionally borrow from the reserve follow suit, responding to "moral suasion" by the reserve board and possible recriminations in the future.

This general rise in lending rates tends to make it more desirable for foreign investors to lend their money in the U.S.

To do this, they must buy American dollars. The result is increased demand for American dollars abroad. This demand for American currency tends to keep its value up compared to other currencies.

Canada has followed the Americans, says Laudadio, because the federal Bank of Canada and its governor, Gerald Bouey, wish to see our dollar maintain its value, particularly against American currency.

And while the 11 Canadian banks are less bound to the Bank of Canada prime rate than U.S. banks to the federal reserve, banks here have been raising interest rates because it is generally in their interest to do so.

It increases profits, says Laudadio, and really has little impact on the total demand for loans, since commercial borrowers can pass costs on to consumer.

This increase in the cost of doing business adds to inflation rather than decreases it, Laudadio says.

LAUDADIO

Interest rates, he says, should be allowed to float to what the market dictates, in which case they would be significantly lower than they are. A 79 or 80-cent Canadian dollar, compared to the U.S. dollar, would not affect over-all inflation significantly.

Tight money policies such as high interest rates might work if there was excessive demand for money, says Laudadio — but there is no such animal.

"What we have is enormous pressure on specific prices — those of fuel and food."

The repercussion of inflation in these two areas is causing North America's current inflationary woes.

If politicians were serious about attacking inflation, they would address more specifically the price of petroleum products and food, rather than allowing monetary developments to depress the whole economy.

How?

As Laudadio sees it, petroleum prices have to rise because we in Canada cannot control them — they are decided abroad by oil-producing nations.

To deal seriously with such price rises, policies should be devised to dampen demand for petroleum products, Laudadio says.

The federal government should introduce large tax increases on the sale of oil products such as gasoline and home heating fuel, creating price increases that would really make people think about their consuming habits.

In such a policy, Laudadio foresees gas prices of as much as 50 or 75 cents per litre or $2 or $3 per gallon.

With their tax on gas, Progressive Conservatives were proposing to reduce the federal deficit, but Laudadio believes this money should be pumped back into the economy by rebating the tax to consumers.

Getting this money in a lump sum, consumers would go out and spend it on goods other than oil products. In this way, demand for oil is dampened without hurting the consumer or making oil companies fat, according to Laudadio.

Laudadio also believes getting rid of marketing boards would help reduce inflation in the food industry.

Manipulation of the supply is what is causing inflation in the food industry, he says. In the last decade, profits in food processing and manufacturing have not risen substantially.

However, he is not optimistic that either of these ideas will be implemented by the current federal government.

"In 1975, 10 deputy ministers sent a report to the minister of agriculture, Eugene Whelan, saying if the federal government wanted to deal seriously with the rising price of food, it should get rid of marketing boards."

Whelan, a strong proponent of marketing boards, ignored the report, Laudadio says.

HOW TO WRITE

A GOOD

CLASSIFIED ACTION

AD

1—IT'S BEST to start your ad with the name of the article or service you have to offer. If you have an apartment, room, etc., for rent, or property for sale; start your ad with the location.

2—BE CLEAR. Readers respond more quickly and favorably by giving complete, definite information. Always include the price in your advertisement.

3—MAKE IT EASY for the reader-prospect to reach you. Always give your telephone number or your name and address. If you do not have regular hours, state a preferred time for the prospect to get in touch with you.

4—PLAY SAFE. You get the greatest reader attention by using consecutive insertions. A six-day order is best and costs less, and you can, of course, stop your ad as soon as you get the results you want. You pay only for the days your ad appeared. Lower yearly rates are available to those who wish to keep their services or products before the public.

5—PLACE YOURSELF in the reader's position and ask yourself what you want to know about your offer. The answer you give will make a good Want Ad.

6—GIVE YOUR PROSPECT every inducement you can with good copy. Classified action ad readers have the money and are already interested in buying the merchandise or service you have to offer; the details and information you give are the most important.

7—TO PLACE YOUR AD, call 386-2121, your direct line number to fast Want Ad action. A courteous, efficient advisor will be glad to help you word and place your order. And remember, Classified Action Ads afford you the most complete coverage. Telephones are open 8:00 a.m. to 6:00 p.m. Monday through Friday, 8:00 to 5:30 p.m. Saturday. Don't allow the reader to speculate.

The Lord is my

I shall not want

He maketh me to lie

He restoreth my soul

He leadeth me in the path-

his name sake

Yea though I walk
the shadow of death

I will fear no evil

For thou art with me,

they comfort me

Thou anointest my head

Surely goodness and

A garden party special

hilda beastall

A dainty yet brilliant annual flower that can be grown from seed by the amateur has the name Schizanthus. It also has been given more than one pet name by gardeners. One is Butterfly-flower, another is Poor-man's-orchid. Neither is descriptive. Schizanthus means "split flower" from the flowers being deeply split or fringed.

Each seedling is capable of growing to a solid mass of small blooms as wide as high (30 cms) during the sumier. Color range is variable from mauve to purple, pink to red, and also buffy colors. Seed packets are usually of mixed colors.

This plant was once popular for greenhouse decoration in early spring from a previous August sowing, but that was in the days when even small greenhouses were kept in production throughout the year and early spring was a dull period inside for flowers until the bulbs came.

Today Schizanthus has a place on balconies facing east or north, on shady patios and sundecks and in garden beds of dappled sunlight.

The limiting factor in use is that they do not take full sun or high heat, and there is no way to lengthen their comparatively short season of growth.

I have found the greatest use for a well grown display of Schizanthus is an "occasion" of importance during summer. They can then be grown to perfection for a fine show for a garden party, an outdoor wedding, summer visitors, or other similar events.

Sow Schizanthus seeds now while it is still March. They germinate easily and must be pricked out when 8 mm high, either into a flat or into separate smallest size pots.

Give them a good humusy soil with a dash of sand. Give them also good overhead light and a cool (though indoor) temperature.

When the little plants are about 5 cms high, each shoot must be pinched back to begin making bushy plants.

As soon as the small pots are filled with roots, transfer each plant into a 10 cm-size, with the same soil mixture. From this size they will go direct into a 15 cm pot where they will bloom some time in June.

Pinching continues until the plants are considered well grown. Buds will form at once and gradually cover the plants, opening over a period of just a few weeks.

One application of fertilizer is given as a boost about 10 days after moving the plants into the final size pots. It can be the all-purpose balanced 6-8-6 or one with a similar makeup. A 2 ml spoonful on the top soil around each plant, well watered in, is the dose.

Don't allow the plants to wilt; don't overwater. Keep them on the cool side — outdoors as soon as May weather is suitable. Temperatures between 7 and 17 deg. are quite suitable once the seedlings are growing in the 10 cms pots.

Groups of a dozen Schizanthus in large pots or tubs make a splendid display for a few weeks in summer. They look more difficult to grow than you will find them. Visitors will be properly impressed.

HARMONIOUS HELP for the Society for Autistic Children, who have learning and skill disabilities, comes in form of a cheque for $435.57 from City of Gardens chapter of the Sweet Adelines barbershoppers. Displaying donation, presented at the Society's fund raising garage and bake sale at the Vic West Community Centre, are (left to right) Clara Shandley, Sweet Adelines chapter president Margaret Colclough and Ann van Noordt. Cheque represents a share of funds raised by the chapter at its fall show and singouts during the past year. (John McKay photo).

MAN-SIZED LOAD is balanced precariously on cart pushed along Hillside Saturday by Times carrier James Morrison, 2600 Dowler. But the haul isn't as difficult as it seems because the box is empty. James planned to use it for what he described as an enemy base in war games with his chums.

Police arrest 1,500 blacks

JOHANNESBURG (UPI) — More than 1,500 blacks were arrested in Johannesburg and its suburbs during the weekend in a massive police crackdown on the black community, a police spokesman said today.

About 1,000 of the arrests were for violations of "influx control laws" — so-called pass laws which limit movements of the black population.

The spokesman, Gen. C. F. Zietsman, said hundreds of blacks had also been arrested for a wide range of of offenses including murder, auto theft, robbery, housebreaking, indecent exposure and illegal brewing of alcohol.

Zietsman said the action was carried out by 3,200 policeman, many called in from Pretoria, 35 miles away. It lasted 48 hours, from late Friday to late Sunday.

The police move followed a reminder to white householders issued Friday in Pretoria about the pass laws and the fines faced by whites for allowing blacks on their property illegally . The maximum penality faced by a white property owner for such an offense is $615.

Rhodesia edgy

SALISBURY (Reuter) — Police fired tear-gas Sunday to disperse about 200 blacks holding an illegal meeting in a wealthy suburb on the outskirts of Salisbury as industrial strikes continued to disrupt the follow-up to black majority rule in an independent Rhodesia.

A police spokesman said two tear-gas canisters were fired into a crowd apparently taking part in a political meeting in the suburb of Borrowdale. Shortly afterward, in the neighboring suburb of Highlands, four whites in a car were stoned by a group of blacks.

Two of the whites sustained cuts and bruises, the spokesman said.

The incidents Sunday followed what political observers described as "a growing atmosphere of tension" that has built up following a wave of wildcat strikes.

Another shortlived strike Sunday saw several hundred bakery workers staying out for several hours, although they went back to work in the evening.

70,000 patients sterilized without being told?

DRIVING THE POINT home, Jodi Rice, this year's "Timmy" showed his stuff in weekend dartathon at Shoreline junior secondary school. Dartathon was initiated by school custodian Andy Turnball, at Jodi's right, to raise funds for the B.C. Lions Society for Crippled Children's Camp Shawnigan. The public made pledges by phoning the school or joined in the fun — at 50 cents a game, $1 for losers.

RICHMOND, Va. (AP) — As many as 70,000 mental patients in 30 U.S. states may have been involuntarily sterilized over several decades, many of them by doctors who believed such operations would help rid society of human maladjustment, The Times-Dispatch reported Sunday.

The newspaper said many of the patients at state mental hospitals were never told of the operations or were operated on for no other reason than convenience.

And the newspaper said authorities in the mental health field add that the national figures do not include thousands of sterilizations performed on mentally retarded people who have never been in institutions.

The newspaper made the report in an article on a three-week study of sterilization practices in the United States. The study was prompted by recent disclosures that an estimated 8,300 sterilizations had been performed in Virginia mental institutions.

Figures collected from the Social Welfare History Archives at the University of Minnesota and other sources show almost 64,000 sterilizations had been performed on patients at state mental hospitals in 30 states by 1964, the paper said.

National totals apparently were not kept after that year, but figures compiled from individual states indicate the total may have reached 70,000 by now, it said.

The American Civil Liberties Union is considering filing legal action against Virginia to get the state to notify those who were sterilized.

"We're only now beginning to look into the national problem," said Suzanne Lynn of the Reproductive Freedom Project of the ACLU in New York. "It's going to take a massive amount of research. We aren't even sure at this point what the status of various state law is."

In 1936, the American Medical Association concluded that there was "very little scientific basis to justify limitation of conception for eugenic reasons."

But 30 years later, 23 states still had laws that provided for involuntary sterilization of mentally retarded people in institutions on social grounds. Authorities say such practices are no longer used, but some of the laws remain on the books.

Antarctic gets Soviet base

NEW YORK (NYT) — The Soviet Union has disclosed that it has set up a new Antarctic base, the first on the inaccessible and little explored west coast of the ice-covered continent.

The station, called Russkaya, meaning Russian, is the seventh permanently staffed Soviet base in Antarctica and is the first Russian post to be set up since 1971. The United States runs four year-round stations.

Chad truce collapses

PARIS (AP) — Fighting between rival Moslem factions raged on in the capital of the central African nation of Chad despite a cease-fire agreement reached Sunday, according to reports reaching Paris.

It was unclear why the cease-fire agreed to by President Goukouni Oueddei and Prime Minister Hissene Habre failed to take effect, but the French news agency Agence France-Presse reported that fighting in N'Djamena, the capital, was continuing.

Reports said life in the Chad capital had been almost completely disrupted. Public water supplies were cut off today and electricity was operating only in a few sections. Traffic was not moving.

Shooting in the capital was not as intense as it had been the previous two days, according to AFP, but the news agency said that could be because both sides, each estimated at about 1,000 to 1,500 men, were running short of ammunition.

The U.S. state department announced during the weekend that it had ordered all American Embassy personnel evacuated from Chad because of the latest outbreak of street fighting.

The various factions in Chad have been fighting since shortly after independence.

HOW TO WRITE A GOOD CLASSIFIED ACTION AD

1—IT'S BEST to start your ad with the name of the article or service you have to offer. If you have an apartment, room, etc., for rent, or property for sale; start your ad with the location.

2—BE CLEAR. Readers respond more quickly and favorably by giving complete, definite information. Always include the price in your advertisement.

3—MAKE IT EASY for the reader-prospect to reach you. Always give your telephone number or your name and address. If you do not have regular hours, state a preferred time for the prospect to get in touch with you.

4—PLAY SAFE. You get the greatest reader attention by using consecutive insertions. A six-day order is best and costs less, and you can, of course, stop your ad as soon as you get the results you want. You pay only for the days your ad appeared. Lower yearly rates are available to those who wish to keep their services or products before the public.

5—PLACE YOURSELF in the reader's position and ask yourself what you want to know about your offer. The answer you give will make a good Want Ad.

6—GIVE YOUR PROSPECT every inducement you can with good copy. Classified action ad readers have the money and are already interested in buying the merchandise or service you have to offer; the details and information you give are the most important.

7—TO PLACE YOUR AD, call 386-2121, your direct line number to fast Want Ad action. A courteous, efficient advisor will be glad to help you word and place your order. And remember, Classified Action Ads afford you the most complete coverage. Telephones are open 8:00 a.m. to 6:00 p.m. Monday through Friday, 8:00 to 5:30 p.m. Saturday. Don't allow the reader to speculate.

He restoreth my soul

He leadeth me in the path—of righteousness for his name sake

Yea though I walk
through the valley of
the shadow of death

I will fear no evil

For thou art with me,
thy rod and thy staff
they comfort me

Thou preparest a table
before me in the
enemies

Thou anointest my head with oil

My cup runneth over

Surely goodness and mercy shall follow me all the days of my life and I will dwell in the House of the Lord forever.

A garden party special

hilda beastall

A dainty yet brilliant annual flower that can be grown from seed by the amateur has the name Schizanthus. It also has been given more than one pet name by gardeners. One is Butterfly-flower, another is Poor-man's-orchid. Neither is descriptive. Schizanthus means "split flower" from the flowers being deeply split or fringed.

Each seedling is capable of growing to a solid mass of small blooms as wide as high (30 cms) during the sumier. Color range is variable from mauve to purple, pink to red, and also buffy colors. Seed packets are usually of mixed colors.

This plant was once popular for greenhouse decoration in early spring from a previous August sowing, but that was in the days when even small greenhouses were kept in production throughout the year and early spring was a dull period inside for flowers until the bulbs came.

Today Schizanthus has a place on balconies facing east or north, on shady patios and sundecks and in garden beds of dappled sunlight.

The limiting factor in use is that they do not take full sun or high heat, and there is no way to lengthen their comparatively short season of growth.

I have found the greatest use for a well grown display of Schizanthus is an "occasion" of importance during summer. They can then be grown to perfection for a fine show for a garden party, an outdoor wedding, summer visitors, or other similar events.

Sow Schizanthus seeds now while it is still March. They germinate easily and must be pricked out when 8 mm high, either into a flat or into separate smallest size pots.

Give them a good humusy soil with a dash of sand. Give them also good overhead light and a cool (though indoor) temperature.

When the little plants are about 5 cms high, each shoot must be pinched back to begin making bushy plants.

As soon as the small pots are filled with roots, transfer each plant into a 10 cm-size, with the same soil mixture. From this size they will go direct into a 15 cm pot where they will bloom some time in June.

Pinching continues until the plants are considered well grown. Buds will form at once and gradually cover the plants, opening over a period of just a few weeks.

One application of fertilizer is given as a boost about 10 days after moving the plants into the final size pots. It can be the all-purpose balanced 6-8-6 or one with a similar makeup. A 2 ml spoonful on the top soil around each plant, well watered in, is the dose.

Don't allow the plants to wilt; don't overwater. Keep them on the cool side — outdoors as soon as May weather is suitable. Temperatures between 7 and 17 deg. are quite suitable once the seedlings are growing in the 10 cms pots.

Groups of a dozen Schizanthus in large pots or tubs make a splendid display for a few weeks in summer. They look more difficult to grow than you will find them. Visitors will be properly impressed.

Try them this year if you have space for the indoor part of the procedure. Schizanthus are happy little flowers for happy occasions.

Bank card profits dip, worse in U.S.

TORONTO (CP) — Canadian bank card operations are far less profitable now than they were a year ago, bankers say, but they are still better off than their U.S. counterparts.

The drop in Canadian card profits raises the possibility of another increase in the interest rate on credit card balances beyond the annual 21 per cent announced last fall.

However, Visa U.S.A. barely broke even in the third quarter of 1979 and the fourth quarter report is expected to show the program's first loss since it went nationwide in the late 1960s.

U.S. banks are taking steps to curtail credit card operations and one is attempting to sell off the card portfolio altogether.

W. R. Fithern, assistant general manager, Visa, for the Royal Bank of Canada, attributed the drop in bank card profits to the sharp rise in the cost of financing.

William Speers, director of the card services division of the Bank of Montreal, said his bank's Master Charge profits have also dropped, and for the same reasons.

"By and large, we find that Canadians are pretty prudent with the use of credit cards," Fithern said.

Videotape sales surge gives Sony 342% hike

TOKYO (AP) — Brisk sales of videotape recorders and television sets propelled Sony Corp. in the fiscal quarter ended Jan. 31 to a 342.6-per-cent earnings gain over levels a year earlier, Sony announced today.

The Japanese electronics company said the gain came despite sharply higher foreign-exchange losses caused by the recent rise in the value of the U.S. dollar against the yen.

Sony earned $79.06 million (U.S.) or 37 cents a share, in the first fiscal quarter, against $17.86 million, or eight cents a share, a year ago. Sales rose to $898.6 million from $608.7 million.

Foreign exchange losses widened to $16.5 million in the quarter from $9 million a year earlier.

Sony said it translated its results for both years at a rate of 247 yen to the dollar, approximately the current value. The dollar was worth 199.825 yen at the end of January, 1979.

Sony's television sales were $258.3 million in the quarter, up from $181 million a year before.

The company said it sold $189.1 million worth of videotape recorders in the quarter, up from $104.2 million in the 1979 first quarter. It said sales of video recorders and tapes accounted for 28 per cent of overall revenues.

A spokesman said Sony plans to raise video recorder production to the 95,000-a-month level from the current 70,000 by September in order to expand production to a rate of one million a year.

2 months' labor

TOKYO (AP) — A Japanese court sentenced two former managers of a chemical plant to two months at hard labor Monday for allowing the dumping of acid wastes that damaged engines of at least three ships in a busy harbor.

The titanium oxide plant had dumped more than 100 million tons of acid wastes during an 18-month period.

No training programs

TORONTO (CP) — Canadian industry is responsible for the shortage of skilled tradesmen, says the chairman of the Ontario Manpower Com[illegible]

Don Pollock said the problem is not a lack of students wanting to become apprentices, but too few training programs within industry.

Speaking at a conference in which industrial training committees discussed a new federal-provincial program to increase training in the skilled trades, Pollock said 40,000 tradesmen will retire in Canada in the next five years, but current programs will train only 5,000.

"We have five years to act," he said. "If we don't do anything, Canada will become a highly-educated Third World country."

Under the new program, the federal department of employment and immigration will provide $20 million this year to help Canadian industry hire and train people in the skilled trades.
